HAPPY IN LIFE AND GLAD IN BRATE.

I wish f could make you understand the joy rolligion is to some of us. It makes a man happy while he lives and glad when he dies. With two feet upon a chair and bursting with dropses, I heard an old man in the f looked around and said: "What has this man got to thank God for!" It makes the lame man to leap as a hart and the dumb sing. They say that the old Puritan religion is a jutceless and joyless religion; but I remember reading of Dr. Goodwin, the celebrated Puritan, who in his last moments What a suggestive preshed The fact is, said; "Is this dring? Why, my bow abides in strongth! I am swallowed up in the great oter to do, do it," "Her ways are ways of pleasantness and all her paths are peace." Oh, you who have been frying to satisfy yourselves with the "south land" of this world, do you not feel that you would, this morning, like to have access to the nother springs of spiritual comforts Would you not like to intelligent charity. The mites sent in by the bless your table and heat your wounds, and 'a south land," a poor portion for any man strew flowers of consolation all up and down

THE GLORIES OF HEAVEN. there is no rest for Sir Walter but in the grave. Stophen (tirand, the world hiese man in his day, or, at any rate, only second in wealth, says: I live the life of a galley slave; when I arise in the morning my one effort is to work so hard that I can sleep when it gets to be night." Charles Lamb, applanded of all the world, in the very mids of his literary triumph, says: "Do you remember, bridget, when we used to laugh from the shilling galler of the play? There are now no good plays to laugh at from the boxes." But why go so har as that I need to go no further than your street to find an illustration of what I am saying.

Murgaret E. Sangater. She organized and directed a movement which began among the contributors to the "Post Office Box" in Young People, which which began among the contributors to the "Post Office Box" in Young People, which has resulted in several important works of intelligent charity. The mites sent in by the children were allowed to accumulate until there was first a sufficient sum to endow a cot in the St. Mary's Free hospital for children. Three thousand dollars went for this, and the cot is known as the Harper's Young People cot. The success of this was sufficient to incite the little ones to increased effect. incite the little ones to increased effort, and they presently built a little church for the whites and blacks in Woodside, N. C.

Next they bought a communion service for a church in Monroe, N. C., and made from the same fund to various fresh air is not the sole donor of these gifts, and she modestly keeps her own connection with the work in the background, but it is safe to say that not the half of what has been done multi have been accomplished without her intelligent and never tiring aid.—D. She Was Tricks. A lady came into a Sixth avenue store the other day and complained that some buttons she had got there were not good.
"What's the matter with them?" she was

"The shanks all came off," she said. She was asked to describe the buttons, and said in reply that if they would show her a certain line of buttons (naming the line) she would point them out. She wanted them to give her enough to make up the set. After some her enough to make up the set. After some time, and the manager and several clerks all failing to find the particular button described, she opened her cloak. She had the buttons on her dress, and had been wearing them-some time, but wanted more of them. It is needless to say that the manager and clerks were all disgusted, and with one accord furned and walked away, leaving her stand-ing there alone.—New York Star.

Corrected Herself.

A little girl who has been taught, by the combined efforts of several members of the family, that she should say, "I beg your pardon," when she does not understand a question, still finds some difficulty in remem-bering the lesson. So many times has the correction been made for her benefit that it has become a family joke, in which she shares, "Will you have some of this?" asked her brother, one day, at table, as he began serving a vegetable,

"Some of what?" asked the little girl, and then, as their mother looked rather reproachfully at them both, in view of their bluntness. she added, with a twinkle in her eyes "Oh, I didn't mean 'Some of what,' I meant 'Some of I-beg-your-pardon,' Youth's Companion.

Napoleon's Swift Decline,

In 1831 Europe was startled by the an-nouncement that Napoleon Bonaparts had died at St. Helena on May 5. This event delivered the continental governments from a secret and perpetual apprehension. The French people preserved in their hearts a remem-brance of which they were, thirty years later, to prove the persistence. Napoleon's robust health in 1815 gave him promise of many years of life, but six years exhausted his years of life, but six years exhausted his physical strength and sometimes his moral courage. The weight of his captivity was unnecessarily increased by paitry annoyances and severity, and he resented them with a bitterness which the isolation and weariness alone might excuse.—Philadelphia Times.

Man's Inhumanity to Woman. The man who found his wife crying about that great cause of woman's tears, "nothing," said it was "mighty mist-teary-ous." And yet she continues to live with him. However, it's easy enough to see what makes her cry, poor woman. Her husband is the leading American humorist.—Bob Burdette.
