Why They Squint.

If a Washington girl looks at you at all on the street she is almost sure to shut one eye-rather, not exactly shut it, but squint it up, says a Washington letter. This is the reason for the Washington wink, or squint, as some call it: The two avenues that form the most call it? The two avenues that form the most popular promenades are at such an angle toward the northwest and west of northwest that the sun's rays in the afternoon, when all the promenading is done, strike one side of the face. Under the right of the pavenent you must look toward the sun to see those coming toward you. The sun is responsible for the squine. The whole line of people going west appear to be winking at those going in the opposite direction. So much has this affected the insistent promenaders on the avenue that many of them have a sight squint in the left eye at all times. The evenue girl is known by her squint.—Chicago
