Master Walter Washington of East Oakwood some days ago while crossing a neighboring field with his shotgun, noticed two large birds flying high. He "let fly" at one, and surprised himself by hitting the fowl full in the wing, one wing being broken. The bird was so great as to partially stun the master and Master Walter had no trouble in securing it. Those who have seen it say it is a young eagle, while others mistake it to be a large hawk. However, it is eagel and can be seen by anyone calling at Mr. Washington's. From the description it is probable the young master has captured one of the common Canadian eagles.
