What two sees are here referred for Some might say that the text meant that Christ was to roign over all the land between the Arabian sea and Caspian sea, or between the Red sea and the Mediterranean sea, or betwoon the fitnete son and the North son Nor in such case my text would have named them. It meant from any large body of water on the earth clear across to any other harse body of water. And so I have a right to roud it: Ho shall have domain from the Atlantic sea to the Pacific sea. Who that has seen them can think of them without having his blood of when Christ lived. These monarchs of foliaga reigned before Cassar or Alexander, and the next thousand years will not shatter their scepter. They are the maste of the constinent, their canvas spread on the wind while the old ship bears on its way through the ages. Their size, of which travelers often speak, does not affect me so much as their longseits.

Their size, of which travelers often sik, does not affect me so much as their gevity. Though so cid now, the branches some of them will crackle in the last contration of the planet. That valley of countrie is eight miles long and a half lie wide and three thousand feet deep, seems as if it had been the means of Connipotence to growd into as ing of Omnipotence to crowd into as small a place as possible some of the most stupendons scenery of the world. Some of the cliffs you do not stop to measure by feet, for they are literally a mile high. Steep so that neither foot of man nor beast ever scaled would only be from glory to glory. Ascent through such earthly scenery in which the crystal is so bright and the red so reservoirs! America for God! flaming would be fit preparation for the "sea of glass mingled with fire." Stand-ing there in the Grand canyon of the Yellowstone park on the morning of Aug. 9, for the most part we held our peace, but after a while it flashed upon me with such power I could not help but say to my comrade: "What a Hall this would be for the last Judgment!" See that mighty cascade with the rainbows at the foot of it. Those waters congealed and transfixed with the agitations of that day, what a place they would make for the shining feet of a Judge of quick and dead. And those rainbows look now like the crowns to be cast at his feet. At the bottem of this great canyon is a floor on which the nations of earth might stand and all up and down these galleries of rock the nations of heaven might sit. And what reverberation of archangels' trumpet there would be through all these gorges and from all those caverns and over all these heights. Oh! the sweep of the American continent, Sailing on Puget sound, its shores so bold that for fifteen hundred miles a ship's prow would touch the shore before its keel touched the bottom, I said: "This is the Mediterranean of America." Visiting Portland, and Tacoma, and Seattle, and Victoria, and Fort Townsend, and Vancouvers and other cities of the northwest region I thought to myself: These are the Bostons, New Yorks, Charlestons and Savannahs of the Pacific coast. But after all this summer's journeying, and my other journeys westward in other summers, I found that I had seen only a part of the American continent, for Alaska is as far west of San Francisco as the coast of Maine is east of it. so that the central city of the American con-

A Melbourne (Australia) letter of July 21 says: "A good deal of excitement arose at Williamstown this morning in consequence of the recovery of nearly £4,000, a portion of the money stolen from the royal mail steam-er Iberia, under the platform of the pier rail-way station. The discovery was made by two boys named George Gordon and James Sweetim, aged 14 and 15 years respectively. As the boys were walking past the platform they saw a mouse come out of a hole and dart under the northern end of the platform. Thinking to have some sport, the boys went on all fours under the floor. Gordon inserted a stick and commenced to work it about. The action produced a clinking sound, which was so unexpected that the lads scratched away the earth and suddenly discovered a mass of sovereigns.

After filling their pockets they covered up the place and went home. Gordon found that he had 118 sovereigns and his companion 164. The father of Gordon Monday took both boys, with the sovereigns, to the police station. The police proceeded to the spot and found 900 sovereigns, including those found by the boys, the whole sum having been in a bag. Subsequently the police, by digging with a garden fork, found three other bags in different places, only a couple of inches under the sand. The grand total of sovereigns recovered is 3,742. The bags in which the money was found are supposed to have been stolen from the royal mail steamer Iberia some time ago. They had evidently been opened and some sovereigns had been taken out of each before they were "planted." Four of the five bags lost have now been
