President Garfield.

On Monday last it became necessary to perform a second operation on the President, in order to afford a fresh outlet for the pus, the flow of which through the old channel was partly obstructed by the healing of the wound, which prevented the insertion of the drainage tube hitherto used. The President bore the operation with great fortitude, and soon rallied from the effects of the ether; but, though there is little or no doubt of his ultimate recovery Dr. Agnew is dissatisfied with his appearance, and his weak digestive powers cause fears that his progress towards convalescence will be very slow. The London Luncet, a very high authority indeed, says that the President will not be out of danger until the bullet is either extracted or encysted-that is until it is covered with the deposi which gradually forms over foreign bodies in the human system and renders them harmless. Thus enclosed, a bul let in the body may be carried for any length of time without the slightest inconvenience, as in the case of the late Mr. Wm. Jameson, who died in this village about three years ago, and from whom were taken, after death, a pistol bail that was fired at him during the rebellion of '37, and part of a brace

The greatest engineering difficulties of the route are said to exist in the neighbourhood of Peterborough, and from Matchedock Bay to Lake Huron."

There are three great advantages bout farming which, in our opinion, more than compensate for all its drawbacks. The first of these is, that there Barrister, &c, is no local competition; the second, that Office Doheny Block, Kent street. the land increases in value year by year, instead of depreciating like a man ufacturer's machinery or a mechanic' tools; and the third, that the surplus produce can always be sold for cash. Of course there are a few good horses in this vicinity, but they are in the hands of men who need them and are not willing to sell them even at their full value, as they do not know where to replace them. The vast majority of horses are what are called "general purpose" animals, which is understood to mean that they will do, in "a sort of a kind of " a way, for any kind of work required of them; but the animals for which there is a ready sale are those specially adapted to some particular service. As long as Canadian farmers were raising horses solely for their own use the kind they have did reasonably well, as they were able to work ordinary land and perform short journeys at a speed of five or six miles a foreign market for superior classes of country in search of them, it is time that all should endeavor to reap a share of the profits to be derived from supplying the demand. Sauriol at his death was 46 years of age, and his widow was left in poverty with eleven children.

Kangaroo Soup. Anyone in London desiring to indulge in a basin of kangaroo-tail soup can do so much more readily than if he were living in any of the great Antipodean towns. Several of the Colonial meat companies have made the tail of the kangaroo an article of export for consumers in England, and a small outlay will place a Londoner in possession of a luxury of Australia which the colonists hard day's work on horseback. As a matter of fact it is the rarest thing possible to see a kangaroo hanging in a Colonial butcher's shop; and kangaroo tail soup is a rare item on the bill-offare of a Melbourne or Sydney diningroom. The soup is a thing which, it once tasted, is to be forever remembered. Prepared as it ought to be, with a due admixture of white wine and the yokes of hard-boiled eggs, it is richer than that made by the hare or grouse. with a peculiar and indescribable flavor.
