What is called a duplex is an arrangement whereby two messages can be sent simultaneously over the same wire and in opposite directions. A duplex obviously requires four men to work it, for if two men are sending one at Boston, the other at New York, each of them requires a receiver to take his business. The capacity of a duplex is exactly double that of a single wire, and it can be worked quite as fast. GYPSIES IN EUROPE.

Fallacies About Them-Where They Came From, and Their Settled Colonies.

The gypsy is a thorough and irreclaimable vagabond, but he has many good points about him. His notions of honesty, especially when a fowl or a horse is in question, do not exactly correspond with our own, and he cannot be brought to understand the out-of-door life unbearable the gypsies settle down after a fashion; those who have covered waggons, with the sight of which we are so familiar, halt with them in some convenient spot and live in small communities, others hire an empty cottage and simply camp down in it, requiring no furniture but the few articles of bedding and cooking utensils which served them in their tents. But the English Rommanies do not affect a town life; they keep strictly to their old nomad traditions. Arrests are continually being made, but with the exception of the plot which was discovered on the imperial yacht, can assert that nothing has lately been found out as to the immediate plans of the Nihilist terrorists. At the same time the authorities are painfully aware that many determined conspirators are still at large and untraced, and, what is worse, that the general public are, if possible, more apathetic on the subject than heretofore.

The police appear to be just as helpless as ever. Threatening notices are still received; proclamations from the secret printing press from time to time appear; and an announcement that the Czar was condemned to death was recently found painted on the seats in the Emperor's private garden at Peterhof. Even the Russian officials begin to acknowledge that police measures are of small avail against the determined enemies of the Government; yet day after day passes, and there are no signs of the adoption of any measures of reform such as are likely to touch the specially disaffected classes. The policy of the Emperor and his advisers has been now sufficiently indicated. It consists of sacrificing every other consideration to the one of endeavoring to secure the contentment of the peasantry. The agricultural classes form, it is true, four-fifths of the population, but, even if it were possible to satisfy all their desires, the Government which neglects and almost ignores the interests of the classes possessing property
