The Fenelon Falls Gazette
Saturday, Nov'r 4th, 1882.
Political Capital.
In our notice last week of the formal opening of the public works in this village, we made the remark that our Conservative friends thought the affair would afford "first-rate facilities for making a little political capital," and we have several times been asked to explain where the political capital came in. In reply to this query all we can say is that, if that were not their idea, it is quite impossible to judge conservative thoughts by conservative actions.
The so-called public meeting was convened by private invitations, extended as far as we can learn, to conservatives only; the members of the committee of arrangements were all conservatives; and so strong was the impression that it was a conservative demonstration that scarcely any reformers attended the banquet. We did not say—nor do we say—that conservatives were to be blamed for trying to make political capital out of the canal, which reformers would probably have been just as ready to do, but to deny that they did so is absurd. We doubt, however, whether their course was as wise as one as could have been adopted; for if the meeting had really been a "public" one—if politics had been thrust as far as possible out of sight, and the electors generally had been invited to glorify Mr. Cameron simply as the advocate of the Trent Valley Canal, it is not at all probable that a good many reformers might have attended the banquet, and that some few of them, who place the interests of Fenelon Falls before the interests of the Dominion at large, might have become his supporters. The attempt to make it a political demonstration was, therefore, a mistake; for reformers feel that their opponents desire to monopolize the whole credit of having brought about the commencement of the canal; which was advocated and insisted upon by one party just as strongly as by the other. Mr. Cameron certainly deserves the thanks of all his constituents for his action in the premises, and it was a blunder not to invite all of them to thank him. Our conservative friends are not as wide awake as we thought they were. They had a splendid opportunity to at least attempt to "rope in" a few reformers, and they recklessly throw it away.
