DOCTOR BEN.

An Episode in the Life of a Fortunate Unfortunate.

CHAPTER XXX. (CONTINUED.)

A RACE.

Ben was off his balance in an instant. Confusion spread itself over and through him. He arose from his chair, and stared through the window...

"That fellow didn't get his breakfast," said Walter. "Paid for too."

"S'pose I eat him, then," said Beckon. "I'm getting a little hungry."

"Crazy!" said the waiter. "Crazy!" asked Walter doubtfully.

Macrae was gone longer than he anticipated. On his return, great was his surprise to find Ben in a half-dozed condition...

There was a hurried consultation between the two, ending in the ordering of a carriage. "Who is this?" asked Macrae, with reference to a man of repulsive aspect...

"Diamis him." "Can't do it; 'wouldn't be safe." "This was more than Macrae had bargained for; but when was it ever known that a man would be so mad as to take a horse out of his hands for a few dollars more than he bargained for?"

"What's up?" "Not a word, partner, but this is a good one. I'll give you a good one."

"No; a scholar. See her out there!" "The 'Ontario Belle' was rocking in the stream, two of her men rattling the blocks with a heavy pulley."
