Its Dreadful Effects.

Although quite common in almost all the large cities in the West, the pernicious habit of opium smoking or "hiting the pipe," as it called, is quite unknown in some districts.

This habit has grown to an alarming extent on the Pacific slope and in all other localities where Chinese are to be found in any great numbers. I have visited many of the Chinese opium joints, both in New York and San Francisco, and on tell at a glance whether a person is addicted to the use of the deadly drug or not. I have had strangers come into my store whose facial appearance indicated that they were the slaves of the habit, and so far as I know there is no sure cure for it except to shun the drug as one would a viper.

The opium used by the Chinese is of an inferior quality, and is brought to this country in the form of a paste, put up in small round foil-lined boxes similar to those used for pills. The pipe is a curious-looking contrivance, and might be taken for a common walking stick were it not for the little metallic bowl placed midway between the mouthpiece and the end of the stem. The atem itself is constructed of bamboo, one end being playged, the other fitted with an amber or metallic tip. In the bottom of the bowl are two small holes, one of which leads through into the stem, the other only about half way.

In using the pipe a small quantity the opium paste is rolled up into a pellet and placed on a wire, the end of which is inserted in one of the holes in the bow of the pipe. The smoker stretches his by applying the bowl of the pipe to the flame from a charcoal brazier. I tried it once and that proved sufficient for me. I had the most delightful dreams, and imagined that I owned the earth, and had a chattel mortgage on the other planets. When I regained consciousness my head felt as large as a Saratoga trunk, and for two days at least every bone in my body ached as badly as if I had been punished with a club. I had no desire to try it again.
