FOUNDED ON EXPERIENCE.

The New England village of N --- contained two riva: doctors, both of whom were also rivals for the favor of the lovely Miss Ella Deane. Dr. Simpson and Dr. Emmons were two quite different individuals. Dr. Simpson was somewhat more polished externally, more conventional, more fresh from radiations of her body as well as the sunhis books, more given to routine, and, like light which might be introduced through the many other physicians lately graduated, felt funnel.
