Adapted to the Listener-It is sometimes necessary to translate Shocking Immorality in the Lumbering plain language into the terms most f miliar to one's hearer. The story is an old one of the clever lawyer who, for the benefit of a sailor among the jury, at once turned his NO BETTER description of a collison betweentwo vehicles into nautical language. The jurer was convinced, and the case won. An exchange gives the following :

An Irish witness was one day undergoing examination in court, regarding some personal injuries sustained by him. "And were you stunned when you were knocked down ?"

asked a lawyer. "Was I what, yer Honor?"

"Stunned." "Sure, an' I don't know what ye mane, "Were you rendered insensible?"

"An' what is insinuible ?" The lawyer was shrugging his shoulders in despair at the s'upidity of the witness, when a juryman rose, and asked to be al-"Did they kill ye, now, Pat ?" "Sure, an' they did intoirely, yer Honor,

A Cure For Drunkenness.

The Cure of Drunkenness is a task with which the regular practitioner has been unable to cope. Nine-tenths of mankind look upon drunkenness as a social vice, which a man may overcome by force of will. Drunkenness is a bad habit we all admit, in the moderate drinker. In the confirmed drunkard it becomes disease of the nervous system. The medical treatment of this disease consists in the employment of remedies that act directly upon those portions of the nervous system which, when diseased, cause lunacy, de mentia, and the drinking habit. Remedies must be employed that will cure the appetite for strong drink, steady the trembling hand, revive the lagging spirit, balance the mind, etc. The nervous system of the dram off, where an old fellow rasped a wheezy drinker being all unstrung or shattered, must be given a nutriment that will take other end where the old woman of the house served out whisky and cigars of the vilest that often follows a sudden breaking off Levely Ask your drugists for it.
