

Carpets and Oil-Cloths, No. 9 Keenan's Block, Kent Street, Lindsay.

shem. Such crops of wheat, such weight of grass per acre, as was there obtained doubled or often trebled Canadian products. Comparing Canadian with English farming practice, no one could doubt that the shelter given had much to do with the fertility of the land. It was a painful contrast to many of our Canadian farms, where it looks as if the owner had cut every tree from the surface, to produce a square expanse of bare earth, as bare, as hard and as unsightly as an Illinois stock yard.

How different this to what a farm should be, with its reserve of forest well kept, free from the intrusion of cattle and in good forest condition, its bed deep with leaves, its young trees rising emulous to the height of the old, ready to replace them when they are cut down for use, its massive wealth of foliage, its pleasant walks, cool and umbrageous in the hottest day; its living springs preserved by trees, its line of wind-breaks opposed to the cutting blasts. Such a farm, so kept, is a place of beauty, a place to live and die in. The other, shaved flat to the surface, is a place to toil, to make money, if farming pays, perhaps; but it is never a pleasure to those who inhabit it, if they possess any of the finer sentiments of our nature. It is not always even the best place to make money by farming, for he who has the trees will have the grass crops, he who has the grass crops will have the manure, and he who has the manure will have the wheat.

The new forestry report is now being distributed, and any one desiring it, by sending his address to me will receive it by mail. It is a pamphlet distributed free yearly by the Ontario Government; there is no price for the book and no charge for postage. It will be found to contain much information interesting to all who interest themselves in the forest.

Yours, &c.,
R. W. PHIPPS,

To the Editor of the Fenelon Falls Gazette.
Sir,—

Can it be possible that, after a three years' acquaintance with the people of Fenelon Falls, the Rev. Mr. McAmmond has so low an opinion of their intelligence as to suppose that his explanation of the J. R. Clarke lecture will be accepted as a satisfactory answer to my innocent and unassuming little epistle? When and where was the announcement made that the holders of double tickets would be refunded the amounts paid for the second lecture? Mr. McA. was careful not to say where. Did it appear in the columns of the Gazette, or in the obscure sheet which flourished in our midst for a brief period? Sometimes styled "Mr. McAmmond's mouth-piece," through which the choir of the Methodist church, the size of the audience, the superiority of the Pastor, &c., were so extensively advertised in language which seemed very much as if it was the production of the reverend gentleman's own pen. He was wroth because I said, "if we recollect aright the tickets were 15 and 25 cents respectively," when, as he says, they were 20 and 25 cents. He is probably correct there, and has me to the extent of 5 cents. I have yet to meet the first person who ever heard of the refund announcement before, but will not for a moment insinuate that it might not have been known to the members of his own flock. We have heard a rumor that he made a rather expensive present to his Sabbath School teachers last Christmas, a candy heart to each; and, assuming that the rumor was not false, I shall not call at the parsonage and ask him to refund, and will take this opportunity of inviting the other holders of 25-cent tickets who do not belong to his congregation to do likewise, and donate our mite to assist him in replenishing his exchequer, on which such an extensive inroad must have been made on that occasion. He accuses me of a deliberate falsehood. Surely, surely, this he must have meant for a joke. He accuses any person of fibbing when their statements have even the semblance of truth! He is particularly sensitive over my remarks about the street parade before the Larry Doodle part of the performance began, and would not doubt like me to take back water; but I shan't do it. If the show was not quite up to his expectations, it was through no fault of his; he had provided the performers, and if a few school boys were all that could be pretailed upon to fall into the procession, it was simply because the common herd had not been sufficiently educated to put a proper estimate on the good, the true and the beautiful. But perhaps he is still unaware of the fact that the last moments of an aged one, whose soul passed to its God that night, were disturbed by the din made by those instruments which were assisting the rendering of comic songs to raise money for the Lord in a Christian church.

He differs also rather widely from me as to the hour when Mr. Clarke was driven to Lindsay. My reply to that is, that I had it from one who ought to have known the truth that he had been driven to Lindsay in time to catch the morning train; and, since the issuing of last week's manifesto, I have met several who told me they had always understood he left in the early morning. It is simply buncombe for him to say Mr. O.'s illness has prevented his return, as it is not many weeks since I saw a notice in a newspaper that he had lectured in Peterborough the previous evening. I have again to repeat the question—Who is to blame?

Yours again,
FENELON FALLS, May 1st, 1889.

THE GREAT LIFE-GIVING ST. LEON.

W. W. Blott has received a fresh shipment of this rare mineral water direct from the wells. Its name and fame as a curative and rejuvenating agent are beyond all calculation. Read the following from the Toronto Globe of March 16th:

"From Nature's breast Truth priceless rings, Fresh food, fruit, flowers and healing springs."

That truth lives, grows, convulses all of nature's priceless value. That truth that led eminent practitioners to exclaim "Impossible to overrate the value of St. Leon Mineral Water."

That rare element deficient in our far-inland clime, the soul of life, that impulse is derived through the use of St. Leon. That impulse that electrifies the vital forces, giving tone and vigor to the organism, till, like nature's bard, we would sing aloud with joy, and feel as flowing through us "The golden hours on angel wings."

This pure, rare, ripe, rich fuel tones up the paralyzed organs, charges the blood with ripe molecular life-food to brain, nerve, bone, muscle and flesh. Its amalgamating and gaseous principles seek egress through channels and pores laden with poisoned waste.

Young and old, stiff, sore, sickly, or even healthy, after fairly testing St. Leon attain heights of vigor and joy past imagining.

All who value life-long, lasting strength and happiness drink St. Leon.
"For love and mercy here we see Thy hand and wisdom, Deity." 3w.
