

opinion of me. He has told your readers that he shall take no further notice of me. Well and good; I can stand on my dignity just as well as he can, and if you, sir, will be good enough to print this, I pledge you my sacred word of honor that I shall take no further notice of his eccentricities.

I have been painfully made to feel the truth of the old adage, "Crows and ministers are hard birds to kill," by the way Mr. McA. has handled me in this little epistolary fight, and that it would perhaps have been better had I said nothing at all about the world renowned nephew of Dr. Adam Clarke, but gracefully submitted to the loss of my few cents. But I find there is considerable difference of opinion as to the amount of loss we sustained on that occasion, because the tickets did not say which of the lectures was to be the five and which the twenty cent. The majority seem to think it was the five cent lecture they got. If this is the case, the parson now owes each holder of a double ticket twenty cents. As soon as this little misunderstanding is arranged they will probably call for the change.

He says that it has been proven, in italics, that I had five deliberate falsehoods in my first epistle. Well, now, that does take me down, for every person I heard discussing the matter said "Querist" was well posted and that every word he said was true; and I felt so proud. But you see what it is to be educated. He, the seal of truth and honour, whose actions, like Caesar's wife, are above suspicion, and who, like George Washington, cannot lie, has discovered five deliberate falsehoods in one short note of mine. One thing I do exceedingly regret, that I said anything about the present to his S. S. teachers. I have got to take back-water here right straight. I can not even take advantage of an eddy round the shore, but must pull straight against the current; and I tell you, sir, in all confidence, this is a mighty hard thing for me to do, for, by some perversion of nature, I am not very much built that way. But I shall, with the best grace I can, own up I was wrong, for, since writing it, it has come to my knowledge that it was not the S. S. teachers, but the members of his choir, to whom he made the expensive present on that occasion. Another little episode of last Christmas. Mr. M. was bound to have the boss Christmas tree of the place, and it is rumoured—remember, it was only a rumour—that he sent a private note to Santa Claus not to take his annual gifts to the little folks, but send them to his Christmas tree, with the name of the intended recipient tagged thereon instead. The chagrin of poor Moses when he found he had been imposed upon with the pair of green spectacles was nothing to what the poor kids must have felt when they saw the empty stockings. What a sad Christmas day it was for them; but it helped to boom his church. Mr. McA. would fain make us believe that he sets little store by money; but allow me to mention another rumour which tends to show him up the other way. A few years ago a lady, perhaps the most gifted and honoured in Ontario, paid this village a visit. There was a tea in the Methodist church on the evening of her arrival. Mr. McAmmond knew she was here, that she was going to the tea, and to speak afterwards in the church; yet, so precious was the quarter in his eyes, he could not give even her a complimentary ticket. This rumour may not be true, but I am in a position to prove that the person whose guest she was said so, though it is possible he also may deny it now. He has a great deal to say about truthfulness—seems to consider it the virtue of all virtues—but there was another about a year ago to the effect that he had to bat an unsalted leek on the same platform where he made an unfounded charge only a few days previous.

He has at last told us when and where it was announced that the people could get their money back. In his own church on two different occasions, to congregations of upwards of five hundred. Great Scott! This is a whooper! When did half the population of Fenelon Falls turn out to hear him preach? This yarn alone gives the whole thing away.

I think it is very ungrateful in him to rate me so soundly for having mentioned those rumours. I hold that he should rather look upon me as a benefactor. Had I not brought them to his notice he might never have had the opportunity of contradicting them, and had a discerning public not known the facts they might have occasioned him incalculable injury. See the injustice he was suffering in the candy heart business alone.

But I must ask you to excuse me, Mr. Editor, from lengthening out this letter, for my fingers are growing stiff; it is getting late; I am tired and sleepy. I hope you will fix up any errors in grammar or spelling you may find in this before you print it, and oblige

Yours for the third and last time,
 QUERIST.

Drink St. Leon Water!

THE GREAT LIFE-GIVING ST. LEON.

W. W. Blott has received a fresh shipment of this rare mineral water direct from the wells. Its name and fame as a curative and rejuvenating agent are beyond all calculation. Read the following from the Toronto Globe of March 16th:
 "From Nature's breast Truth priceless rings,
 Fresh food, fruit, flowers and healing springs."
 That truth lives, grows, convulses all of nature's priceless value. That truth that led eminent practitioners to exclaim "Impossible to overrate the value of St. Leon Mineral Water."
 That rare element deficient in our far inland clime, the soul of life, that impulse is derived through the use of St. Leon.
 That impulse that electrifies the vital forces, giving tone and vigor to the organism, till, like nature's bard, we would sing aloud with joy, and feel as flowing through us "The golden hours on angel wings."
 This pure, rare, ripe, rich fuel tones up the paralyzed organs, charges the blood with ripe molecular life-food to brain, nerve, bone, muscle and flesh. Its amalgamating and gaseous principles seek egress through channels and pores laden with poisoned waste.
 Young and old, stiff, sore, sickly, or even healthy, after fairly testing St. Leon attain heights of vigor and joy past imagining.
 All who value life-long, lasting strength and happiness drink St. Leon.
 "For love and mercy here we see Thy hand and wisdom, Deity." 3w.

WHERE DID YOU GET THAT SHIRT?

Rather an impertinent question, you will probably say, and yet when you consider the importance of such a necessary part of your wearing apparel you will probably conclude that we are justified in asking the question, as so very many are puzzled, and justly so too, to know exactly where to go to get a perfect fitting and well-made shirt at a reasonable price. Some imagine that they cannot be fitted unless they are measured and have their shirts made to order and pay a big price. This idea is entirely erroneous.

We can give you a better Shirt for $1 than you can have made to order for $2.

We buy our shirts direct of the manufacturers and have them made according to our own plans and specifications, and have introduced some entirely new and original ideas, thus perfecting our shirts to such a degree as to make them comfortable and perfect fitting. Our Shirts are all reinforced back and front, artistically cut and skilfully made and none but the very best material used in their manufacture. We can, therefore, with confidence invite you to buy your shirts at the City Store, knowing as we do the satisfaction and comfort you will enjoy in one of our perfect fitting shirts. We keep shirts of every grade and quality, and are always fully assorted in sizes and prices. At the present time we are offering shirts at bonanza in dressed white shirts. We have secured a line of 50 dozen which we are selling at 60c. each, the regular wholesale price of which is $10.50 per dozen. To make a long story short we are selling a regular dollar shirt for sixty cents.
