Seattle Burned.

GREAT FIRE IN THE PUGET SOUND CITY.

PORTLAND, Oregon, June 7.—A special to the Oregonian, from Seattle last night, says:—The business portion of Seattle, the largest city in the Territory, is in ashes. Every bank, hotel and place of amusement, all the leading business houses, all the newspaper offices, railroad depots and miles of steamboat wharves, coal bunkers, freight warehouse and telegraph offices have been burned. The fire began near the corner of Front and Pearl streets, in the Seattle Candy Factory building, at 2.30 p. m., and before midnight it had consumed the whole of the business section of the city northward of Stittson & Post's mill, along Front and Second streets to the water front, involving a loss of over $5,000,000. The city is literally wiped out, except the residence portion on high ground.

It is estimated that the loss by fire to the city in building alone is $10,000, 000, and all the personal losses will probably reach $20,000,000. It is thought many persons must have perished in the flames.

Giant powder was used to blow up buildings in the hope of staying the progress of the fire, but to no effect.
It is reported that two men have been lynched for stealing.

The Next Pope.

NEW YORK, June 7.—A despatch from Rome to the Times says all Europe is now considering the question, "Who will be the next Pope?" The death of Leo XIII. would create a stir which would attract the attention of Americans more than any event that has occurred within the memory of the present generation.

It is more than possible that European jealousies, no less than the present situation of the Vatican, would dictate the election of the American Cardinal, Archbishop Gibbons, of Baltimore, to the chair of Peter. That is the consensus of opinion in Rome. The Pope is not very strong, and reliable reports state that his wiry frame cannot much longer endure the strain of his age and cares.

Up to Thursday night $400,000 had been subscribed in New York for the flood sufferers.

A tornado at Danvers, Ill., on Friday evening destroyed a church, blew freight cars from the tracks, ruined a factory and unroofed barns and houses.

Russian Wheat Crop.

The British Consul-General at Odessa, Mr. Sandwith, has just issued his report on the agriculture of Southern Russia.
He states that the harvest for last year was even greater than that of 1887, but the farmers were quite unable to take advantage of it. With acres of waving grain around them, they have neither the hands to reap it, nor were means at their disposal to carry it to market.
Machinery has, undoubtedly, done much to help the Russian farmer, and the extension of railways has tended to facilitate transportation; but neither machinery nor railways have kept pace with the growth of cultivation. The region lying between Odessa and Nicolaiev, a country of admirable fertility, 12,000 square miles in extent, has not a single line of railway, and is untraversed by even a macadamized road.
So great was the demand for labor when the land there was ready for reaping, that wages rose in some instances to 10s.
($2.50) a day, the usual scale of pay in ordinary times scarcely averaging 1s.
(25 cts.) The coal mines in the Donetz basin were abandoned by the miners for the more lucrative employment of the field; but, in spite of this extra supply of labor, it proved quite inadequate to the demands made upon it, while the want of rolling stocks fell far short of the requirements of the moment, and the enormous distances to which the grain had in many cases to be carried to the nearest station entailed an expense which swallowed profits wholesale.
From these two causes combined, instances occurred of farmers leaving hundreds upon hundreds of acres uncut, and abandoned as fodder for cattle.
While grain has been pouring into Odessa, and has been conveyed to Briton and Mediterranean ports by a large fleet of steamers than ever before visited the port, it is believed that more than a quarter of the crop still remains in the hands of the farmers, and the local granaries are full to overflowing.

The damage done by frost in the Niagara district is not so serious as at first reported.

A quarter of a million pounds of candy are bought every day by the people in the streets of New York.

Forest fires are raging again to the north of Duluth all through the Ver-million iron range, and a great loss is expected.

There is an old negro in Quitman County, Georgia, who has never owned a lock. He has been for years nailing a bar of wood across the door of his crib every night.

Those five men who found a bag containing $1,000 in cleaning out a Philadelphia well have done nothing but loaf ever since, and two of them are now in gaol. Sudden wealth is rarely productive of good.

A Frenchman in Paris advertises that he will pay $25 reward "for a strictly novel and original way of committing suicide." It's just that kind of men who always dodge ice waggons and butcher carts.

A soldier belonging to a detachment of the Austrian army in Transylvania was recently killed by a bullet from a Manlicher rifle, discharged during target practice at a distance of more than two and a half miles.

Richard Biekle, of East Zorra, has a four-year-old bull with a third horn attached to the tip of one of its ears, and John Nichol, of North Easthope, is the happy possessor of a duckling hatched without feet, while James Doherty, of the same township, rejoices in the ownership of a gosling with four feet.

A Belfast (Me.) man does not think so much of object lessons as he did. He fell the other day while shingling his barn, but escaped without injury. His son was away at the time, and on his return the old gentleman told him about the accident, and in trying to show just how it happened fell from the roof again, this time breaking a leg.

The biggest snake story of the year comes from the boundless Texan prairies. A French citizen near Gainesville digging a well came upon remains which when unearthed proved to be those of an immense rattlesnake. After laying bare nineteen feet of the remains of the monster of other times, the people found the entire skeleton of a man of tremendous stature in the stomach of the skeleton of the snake. The remains of the man and the serpent, so far as the serpent has been exhumed, are as perfect as when denuded of flesh, and were doubtless covered by lime and gravel soon after death.
