Village Council.

Fenelon Falls, Sept. 17th, 1889. The council met at the call of the reeve. Members present, the reeve and councillors Ellis, McDougall and Littleton. Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

Mr. McDougall gives notice that at this meeting of the council he will introduce a by-law confirming the appointment of F. J. Kerr as auditor for the balance of the current year.

Moved by Mr. McDougall, seconded by Mr. Ellis, That By-law No. —, entitled a by-law to confirm the appointment of F. J. Kerr as auditor for the balance of the current year, be now introduced and read a first time.—C'd.

By-law read and passed in the usual manner.

Mr. Dickson addressed the council with reference to a re-survey and staking of the cemetery, and an estimate cost of the work, which was laid over for future consideration.

Moved by Mr. McDougall, seconded by Mr. Ellis, That By-law No. —, entitled a by-law to appoint a collector of rates for the current year, be now introduced and read a first time.—Carried.

By-law read and passed in the usual manner.

Mr. Jos. McArthur personally applied to the council to have that portion of the street at the east end of Francis street, which runs through his lots, closed. The matter was laid over for future consideration.

Mr. Richard Cooper and others complained of the bad condition of the drainage along the west end of Bond street. The complaint was referred to the street and bridge committee on motion of Mr. Ellis, seconded by Mr. Littleton.

Moved by Mr. Littleton, seconded by Mr. Ellis, That the special audit of the cemetery book be received and adopted, and that the auditors be paid one dollar each.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. McDougall, seconded by Mr. Littleton, That the motion on August 13th, appointing Jas. Cameron and W. L. Robson auditors of the cemetery accounts, be and the same is hereby rescinded.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Littleton, seconded by Mr. Ellis, That this council grant the sum of five dollars to Mr. W. E. Ellis, for the purpose of repairing the road down to the wharf, and that the same be approved of by the street and bridge committee.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Ellis, seconded by Mr. Littleton, That the following accounts be paid, and that the reeve give his order for the same: E. D. Golden, 211 loads gravel, $84.40.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. McDougall, seconded by Mr. Ellis, That the clerk write the railway authorities about the trains running through the village at a high rate of speed, without sounding any alarm, as complaints have been made by a number of ratepayers.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Ellis, seconded by Mr. McDougall, That the clerk be instructed to ask for tenders to remove the stumps and brush off the unsurveyed portion of the cemetery, the said work to be under the supervision of the street and bridge committee. Tenders to be received not later than Sept. 28th.—Carried.

The council then adjourned, to meet at the call of the reeve.

COMMUNICATIONS.

Letter No. 2.

To Mr. Thomas Hopkins, Superintendent of St. Peter's Sunday School, Verulam.

DEAR SIR.— "All are by nature the children of wrath."—Eph. 2. 3. "For as in Adam all die"—the young as well as the old—"even so in Christ shall all be made alive"—1 Cor. 15. 22—and why not the young as well as the old? Infants, in a state of unconsciousness, receive the taint of original sin from their parents, through the first Adam, and why should they not, by an act of which they are as little conscious at the time, namely, their baptism, be made partakers of the righteousness and life of the second Adam? It must be so, for the Scripture says, "Where sin abounded, grace did much more abound." There is no inherent virtue in the sacrament itself; but we believe that God has been graciously pleased to annex a certain grace to the outward sign, when that sign is worthily received.

And infants have no actual, unrepented of sin to bar their worthy reception of the sign. Read with care the latter part of the fifth chapter of St. Paul's epistle to the Romans. The apostle alludes in the 14th verse to infants: "Nevertheless death reigned from Adam to Moses, even over them that had not sinned (infants) after the similitude of Adam's transgression, who is the figure of him that was to come. But not as the offence, so also is the free gift. For if through the offence of one (the first Adam) many be dead (infants as well as adults) much more the grace of God, and the gift by grace, which is by one man (the second Adam), Jesus Christ, hath abounded unto many."

Therefore as by the offence of one (the first Adam) judgment came upon all men to condemnation; even so by the righteousness of one (the second Adam) the free gift came upon all men to justification of life." Apply this language to the case in hand. There are no clearer declarations of scripture than these, namely, that the "offence" of the first Adam was sufficient to involve the world in ruin, and that the "righteousness" of the second Adam is sufficient to rescue the world from that ruin. If, then, every child that is born into the world be a "child of wrath," inheriting a depraved nature, and defiled by birth-sin, unless there be some way of applying the redemption wrought by Christ upon the Cross for all men, to each individual infant, the "righteousness" of the second Adam would not be co-extensive with the "offence" of the first Adam, nor the remedy co-extensive with the disease.

I would next call your attention to that remarkable discourse of our Lord, with Nicodemus, recorded in the third chapter of St. John's gospel. The force of this discourse, as an argument for infant baptism, is lost in a great measure to those who cannot read it in the original Greek. In this discourse there are three words, in our version, translated "man," and on them the strength of the argument rests. They are these: "Anthropos," a man, any man; "Oudeis," no man; and "tis," every man, or every one. The whole discourse reads thus: "There was a man (Anthropos) of the Pharisees, named Nicodemus, a ruler of the Jews. The same came to Jesus by night, and said unto Him, Rabbi, we know that Thou art a teacher come from God; for no man (Oudeis) can do those miracles that Thou doest, except God be with him. Jesus answered and said unto him, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man (tis) be born again, he cannot see the Kingdom of God. Nicodemus saith unto Him, How can a man (Anthropos) be born when he is old? Can he enter the second time into his mother's womb and be born? Jesus answered, Verily, verily, I say unto thee, Except a man (tis) be born of water and the spirit he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God." At what time then, except in Baptism, can a child be born of water as well as the spirit. The word (tis) used and repeated by our Saviour is one that includes every living soul, from the newly born infant to the man of one hundred years old and upwards. It is of the same import as when we say, "Man is mortal." All are included. If there was no other allusion to the subject of Infant Baptism in scripture, this discourse alone is to me sufficient evidence of its scriptural character.

Yours faithfully, WM. LOGAN. Fenelon Falls, Sept. 15th, 1889.

To the Editor of the Fenelon Falls Gazette.

DEAR SIR.— Having quietly looked on for the last four weeks at the castigation which Mr. St. George has been giving the Worthy County Master of the Orange Association, and at his perille defence, I cannot, with your permission, refrain from saying something about this already widely-spread subject. I was one of the many amused and disgusted listeners at the late 12th of August celebration held in Fitzgerald's grove, Fenelon Falls; not at anything that was said by any person who made a speech, for I think they all did exceptionally well and came out plainly and boldly on the particular question which was the theme of the day, and which all who assembled there were interested in hearing; but with Mr. Fairbairn, who, when asked by Mr. St. George the plain question why he did not sign the Equal Rights Petition, first tried evasion by replying that he (St. G.) was not an Orangeman, and therefore not entitled to an answer. But when pushed into a corner by Mr. St. George's reply—such a reply as no other Brother present could have given—he then took another tack, a mere subterfuge, a plain and palpable untruth, patent to many persons present, and said it was a "drunken boy" who had asked him to sign it; and, on temperance principles it is to be presumed, he refused. Such an exhibition of shuffling has not been seen on a public platform in the memory of the "oldest inhabitant." And then his attempt to direct public attention from his own ignominious acts by attacking Mr. Barron for something he had never done, took entirely away any little sympathy that the crowd had for his discomfiture. Such humiliation seldom falls to the lot of any person who always aspires to be at the head of every public meeting. It is to be hoped that he will now see that wearing a full regalia and riding a white charger on the 12th of July will not pass for unselfish loyalty.

The next thing we find is his rushing into print pretending to reply to Mr. St. G., and not refuting one of his statements except the convent affair, about which Mr. St. G. was misinformed, and which he has since publicly retracted, having no intention of writing or saying an untruth about him. It is truly amusing to observe how this County Master, elected by a "standing vote" of his brethren, can give so many versions of the same transaction, viz. his not signing the Equal Rights Petition. The "drunken boy," Mr. Moore, says that, when asked by him to sign the petition, Mr. Fairbairn replied that he would not go back on an old veteran like Sir John Macdonald. At Fenelon Falls he, the County Master, "elected by a standing vote of his brethren," told a brother Orangeman in the presence of the assembled Orangemen and brethren, that it was because a "drunken boy" who turns out to be a brother Orangeman in high standing, asked the Great Mogul, and the very apostle of temperance, to sign it, and then in public print, over his own signature, says, "I think better of myself and better of my country than to sit in judgment over one hundred and eighty of the people's representatives, as against eight Conservatives; for the five Grits who were elected to vote against Sir John A. Macdonald would do so if it was to break their necks." Now, Sir, here are three different reasons given for the same thing, not one of them having any bearing on the other, but as diametrically in opposition to each other as the poles. The last reminds me of the old Sunday school illustration of following a multitude to do evil by a flock of sheep going over a bridge, and a flock leader of the flock taking fright at something, leaps over the guards of the bridge into the river, and the rest of the flock, in a mad rush, follow to certain destruction. Now the old Orange leader, Bowell, leaps over the loyal Orange bridge, and County Master Fairbairn madly follows in his big brother's wake.

And now for his Equal Rights policy, which he says has "ever been his motto." What is it? Why, a strong application of the cat-o'-nine-tails to Mr. St. G. for asking a question that exposed his (Mr. F.'s) double dealing. Is this in accordance with his oft-quoted phrase of "British fair play"? If this be equal rights I don't think it will ever make much advancement in this free country, when our greatest liberty, free speech, would be denied us, according to that. And with no great stretch of the imagination you, sir, for allowing your columns to be used in this discussion of this great Onocion, might be treated to a dose of Empire politeness and "shot in your tracks."

And further, this apostle of temperance goes on by inference to make the dastardly charge against Mr. Moore that he is drunk, by saying that he "would rather lay over him the mantle of charity than expose him." This is apologizing to Mr. Moore with a vengeance.

I have been told that this County Master, who has been elected by a standing vote, etc., is very indignant at Mr. John Junkin for furnishing the information to Mr. St. G. that led to the exposure of his double dealing. I can assure him he is entirely worthy of the mark. I am well acquainted with the gentleman who supplied the facts to Mr. St. G., and who will not take one drop of back water on the same. It was no discredit to any one. Thanking you for space,

Yours very truly, OBSERVER. Fenelon Falls, Sept. 16th, 1889.

MILL ACCIDENT.—On Wednesday last Mr. John Chambers had the tip of the middle finger of his left hand cut half way through by a saw in Mr. John A. Ellis's mill, where he is employed.

A BAD BOY.—Tommy Labertie, apparently nine or ten years old, slapped little Miss Pigeon, about his own age, at school the other day; and last night he had to appear before Mr. Dickson, who fined him a dollar and costs for his ungallant conduct. His daddy will have to lend him the money.
