It is said that the first thing that the new Government of Brazil did was to send a telegram to the Rothschilds asking for their continued financial support, and the reply received was favorable, and undoubtedly did much toward solidifying the new Government.

The main entrance of the Monte Carlo gambling house, which was closed all summer, was reopened a week ago. A new wing, which will be filled with more tables, has been added, and the vestibule and smoking promenade have been enlarged, and lifts have been built to take people up from the railroad.

Two or three years ago the Russian Government established credit banks for the purpose of assisting the owners of large estates who happened to be pressed for money. The effect has been that the number of mortgaged estates is much greater than ever, and many belonging to high nobles are to be sold this year for nonpayment of the interest on loans.

The press of Italy is discussing the question of capital punishment, which is at present illegal, confinement at hard labor for life being the maximum punishment bestowed by the Italian laws. It is contended by many influential papers that a return to death sentences is necessary in view of the great increase in murder since the existing laws went into operation.

The Philatelist Club of Vienna is arranging for an international postage stamp exposition there next year. The year 1890 was chosen because it will then be just fifty years since postage stamps were introduced, forty years since they came into use in Austria, and ten years since the club was founded. The exhibition will take place in the Austrian Industrial Museum. A committee of five is organizing it.

The French professor of chemistry, Dr. Milkfleurs, recently exhibited before a meeting of Parisian scientists several bricks of petroleum which he has discovered how to solidify by an original process. The petroleum bricks were hard enough to be handled without inconvenience, yet soft enough to be cut with a stout knife. They burned slowly when touched with a lighted match. Milkfleurs says they are non-explosive and inexpensive.

The new regulations for military receptions in Germany make this distinction between "great" and "small" receptions: Where cavalry is available, in the great receptions, a squadron will accompany the guest as escort, half in front of the carriage, and half behind. The officer in command will ride abreast of the right hand wheel. If the place be a fortress, a salute of 38 guns will be fired by the forts which the Emperor passes; for the royal princes, 21 guns; for the Prince of Hohenzollern and other reigning princes, 12 guns; and the same regulations are to be observed for foreign rulers and heirs to thrones.

She was Saved

From days of agony and discomfort, not by great interpositions, but by the use of the only sure-remedy cure—Patnam's Painless Corn Extract. Tender, painful corns are removed by its use in a few days, without the slightest discomfort. Many substitutes in the market make it necessary that only "Patnam's" should be asked for and taken. Sure, safe, harmless.

THE WIND OF A CANNON.

How It Can Wound and Bruise.

Sir Robert Rawlinson, K. C. B., sends us the following striking narrative: "On the morning of the 10th of June, 1855, I was riding in company with some military officers on their way to the trenches before Sebastopol, and entering the ravine known as 'The Valley of the Shadow of Death,' when in the act of turning round to go back was swept down with my horse by a 42-pound Russian steel shot. The shot passed in front of me, from left to right, cutting the reins out of my left hand and passing through the thin jacket under my right arm. I had in my right-hand trousers pocket a small leather purse with a steel rim to it and a little silver in it. This purse bruised the strong cloth of the pocket and my flannel shirt, as also the crest of the pelvis. My own impression was that the shot had struck me full in the abdomen, and that I was out in two. I fainted and my wound bled copiously, and I was taken to the nearest temporary hospital. Now, as to the wind of this shot. It could have had nothing to do with my wound. As explained, the shot traversed across the abdomen and met with nothing solid but the purse and money in my pocket, and the contact was sufficient to break the strong cloth of the pocket under the purse—not above it—the flannel shirt, and the flesh and bone of the pelvis. And remember, so slight must have been the touch of the shot on my clothes that they were not abraded or marked; the thin summer coat being perforated, but the outer edge not broken. How could the wind perform this feat? The full force of this shot if only 1,000 feet per second, would have a striking power of about 49,000 pounds; but, cannoning on me in front, the force or blow might be only equal to a severe blow by a man striking below the belt. If this shot had passed over any more solid portion of the body, as the head or the back, sudden death would have been the result; but as it barely touched the clothes upon the abdomen the effect was lessened. At all events, I was severely wounded by a forty-two-pound round shot, and most certainly not by the wind of it; and by reason of the grand surgery of the late Sir James Ferguson I am now alive to tell the tale."

A medical correspondent quotes Prof. Sir T. Longmore upon the matter thus: "The true explanation of the appearances presented in those cases which were formerly called 'wind contusions' appears to rest in the peculiar direction or degree of obliquity with which the missile has happened to impinge against the yielding and elastic skin, together with the position of the internal organs injured between this missile and other hard substances in their neighborhood. The surface itself is not directly torn or cut into, because the impact of the projectile has not been sufficiently direct to effect an opening; but the parts beneath are crushed by the pressure to which they have been subjected between the combined influence of the weight and momentum of the shot on one side and of some hard resisting substance on the other. There are no cases I have seen or read of, but as it is barely touched the clothes upon the abdomen the effect was lessened. At all events, I was severely wounded by a forty-two-pound round shot, and most certainly not by the wind of it; and by reason of the grand surgery of the late Sir James Ferguson I am now alive to tell the tale."

An Offensive Breath

Is most distressing, not only to the person afflicted if he have any pride, but to those with whom he comes in contact. It is a delicate matter to speak of, but it has parted not only friends but lovers. Bad breath and catarrh are inseparable. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cures the worst cases, as thousands can testify.

When a nun elopes and marries it is always with a nun-known man.

Yes, he loves you now, 'tis true
Lass with eyes of violet-blue,
Lips as sweet as honey-dew,
Bonny little bride!
Will he love you as to-day
When your bloom has fled away,
When your golden locks are grey,
Will his love abide?

Yes, if it is the true kind it will survive all the inevitable wastes and changes of life. But, it is every woman's desire and duty to retain, as long as she can, the attractions that made her charming and beloved in youth. No one can keep her youthful bloom or equable temper if weighed down and suffering from female weakness and disorders. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a remedy for these troubles. Sold by all druggists.
