

North Verulam.

Correspondence of the Gazette.

Our picnic came off on Dominion day, and it was rather a dull affair for the children on account of the heavy rain; but the young men and women spent a very enjoyable time "tripping the light fantastic toe" in Mr. T. Robson's barn.

Mr. John Lamb raised his fine large new barn on Monday, June 30th, and it reflects much credit on the framer, Mr. George Littleton. It was up early enough in the evening to allow every young man to go for his best girl, and the foundation of the building was well tried by the vigorous dancing, which was kept up until "the wee sma' hours ayeont the twal."

Mr. A. Northey is making a great show stumping the roads here with his new machine manufactured by Mr. T. Robson, of the Cameron lake foundry.

Some farmers have commenced haying in this section.

The recent rains did a great deal of good, though they made the roads very muddy. They came just in time, and the crops, which were beginning to suffer from the previous fortnight's dry weather, are quite refreshed again.

Correspondence of the Gazette.

The special correspondent of the Warder must have felt the effects of what he tasted when he wrote the article that appeared in the issue of the 20th ult. Let us try again, Mr. Special. The thought struck a little man who lives on a hill, and who is noted for his great desire for popularity, that something ought to be done to celebrate the conservative victory; and he accordingly constituted himself captain, and took a friend who lives south on a bank as his lieutenant. Early on the morning of Wednesday, June 11th, Miss Betty—as we will call her—was put upon the tramp to give the invitations to the expected faithful, the good old conservatives, for the evening show. Lo and behold! there was what might properly be termed a rag of the party put in an appearance. The rank and file here will vote the ticket every time, but properly refuse to be led by that gallant pair. A fire was kindled by the roadside, torches were lit, and the necessary instruments of music were gathered from about the smiddy, such as old mould boards, and a thing that sounded very much like a tin whistle. The gallant officers then marched the crowd westward, and did not come into contact with the enemy until opposite the poor Grit's gate, where a halt was made. It was then that evil thoughts arose, and threats to fire property were made; but the lieutenant consoled himself for that time by exploding his mighty cannon, a glass bottle filled with powder. After a still farther march west there was another halt, and a tremendous howl went up. The poor Grits began to tremble, and the dumb animals all became greatly excited. Was it possible that some terrible calamity was about to befall them? The retreat march was then made up the long lane to the mansion of victory, which they entered, and did eat and drink; and, if not belied by a party who was present, a fair percentage of them got into a condition that caused a snicker to run through the bible class on the following Sabbath evening, when one of the leaders had occasion to condemn the drinking of whisky to excess. This must be very flattering to the temperance people of East Victoria, but it is just what might have been expected. As soon as the Grits were satisfied that the two leaders had gone home, they thought they might sleep in safety, and so went to bed.

As our correspondent took the trouble to write the above, which came just too late for last week's issue, we insert it; but we must decline anything more relating to the election, which is now a thing of the past, and it is better to "let bygones be bygones" than to keep alive the feeling of antagonism excited by the contest.—Ed.
