

(Concluded from first page.)

by a vote of the vestry, thereby breaking a deed of trust, by converting one trust into another, a thing that the Synod has no power to do, and would not do. I received the land in question from my predecessor as so much glee, yielding a certain portion of my income. I hold it now against the Synod by right of possession, having held it for over 18 years. Mr. McDougall says that a good deal has been said &c. Yes, enough to leave the impression on the minds of those who do not know better that the congregation made up from their own resources the Endowment Fund they appear desirous to control. One cent of it, however, was not made up in that way. The only interest the congregation have in the matter is to receive the ministrations of the clergyman supported by it, and to try and profit by them. It, on slight reflection, will be seen that it might be disastrous to those intended to be benefited if the management of the endowments were entrusted to the congregations. In a small congregation like ours it is easily possible that a majority of those entitled to vote on the matter might belong to the Church of England to-day, and to something else tomorrow, and therefore be able by their mere votes to carry the endowment with them to their new home. Happily under the present management such an event cannot happen.

Though Mr. McDougall's letter is a very short one, it suggests much. It speaks of my leaving the parish. While I am explaining I may as well explain fully. I would have left long ago, if I had not seen that there was a determination on the part of some to drive me away. I would not allow any one to drive me away. This was tried, first by endeavouring to empty the church, under the impression that when so emptied I would have to leave. This has, however, not happened yet. The next attempt was by the subtle contrivance of a curate, brought here with the ill concealed intention of supplanting me, which came to a very disastrous termination. Though it was pretended that the Curate arrangement was for the benefit of Cameron and Cambray, yet, immediately after the collapse, it was suggested to me by Mr. McDougall himself that I should give up Cameron and Cambray and fall back into the old rut. I did not do so, nor do I intend to do so. The machinery for the removal of a clergyman is very simple, and can be put in motion by any one.

1. Any one can make an accusation that through age and infirmity the clergyman has become unable to perform the duties appertaining to his office.

2. Or that he willfully refuses or neglects to perform such duties.

3. Or that the clergyman is immoral.

If any of these accusations are made to the bishop he will then appoint a commission to inquire into the facts of the case, and if the accusation, whatever it may be, be found true, the clergyman will have to pay the expense of the commission, and, if not the accusers would have to pay the expense of the inquiry. Before my leaving a good many preliminaries will have to be accomplished; the paying for my improvements at their present valuation will be about the first. I have now arrived at the age at which I can ask for superannuation, but it rests with the bishop to grant or refuse it. If I should stay ten years more my superannuation allowance could not be increased. I am entitled now to as much as I can be. All other arguments having failed the apostle of mischief, the consecration dodge is being used extensively in the present crusade. I am represented as having sold consecrated ground on which to build a stable and houses of a like character. The land was never consecrated, the graveyard, of which it was a part, not having been fenced at the time the church was consecrated. It is intended that that portion of the land which now forms the graveyard shall be consecrated when the bishop next visits the parish. But suppose the land had been consecrated, what would be the difference between Mr. McArthur's houses and those of Mr. Kerr and Mr. McCleunen, which are on the land by the sanction of the congregation? Only this, that the latter have been desecrating the land for 20 years, whereas the former have been doing the same thing for less than one year. St. Paul gives excellent advice to those whose chief occupation it is to accuse their neighbours: "For wherein thou judgest another, thou condemnest thyself; for thou that judgest doest the same thing." St. James has some strong remarks about the tongue and its government which are worthy of consideration: "The tongue is a fire, a world of iniquity, and it is set on fire of hell. . . . But the tongue can no man tame, it is an unruly evil full of deadly poison." Then the tongue that never wags without throwing its "deadly poison" on somebody, must be the one "set on fire of hell." When St. James said the "tongue can no man tame," he must have meant the remark to be confined to his own age or to moral persuasion, for we know that what could not be accomplished by Christian preaching in St. James's day, has often been accomplished effectually in our day by the application of the civil law, which is an excellent, though often an expensive, corrective in such a case.

Yours,
WM. LOGAN.

A Big Shipment of Apples.

A very general impression has gone abroad that the apple crop in Ontario is almost a failure. This is true of the Southern tier of counties, but it will surprise many to learn that Mr. G. H. Fowler of Burford has secured from the northern countries, and is now engaged in packing, fully 20,000 barrels. A Globe reporter saw samples of the fruit, and nothing finer has ever been marketed in Canada. The least comforting part of the matter is that this immense shipment will go to Glasgow and Liverpool. It may be added that Mr. Fowler has been engaged for some years in this trade, and by permitting his brand to be put only on the best quality of apples has largely contributed to the permanency of our trade with the old country.
