To the Gents' Furnishings Buyer.

For the Spring's business I have made unusual and extraordinary preparations in all the Departments. No point has been left uncovered. No effort has been spared to make the Store attractive to a degree. The Assortments are enormous. The Prices are the lowest, and, in justice to herself or himself, every buyer should give my display a thorough and critical inspection. In all my transactions, both buying and selling, I am conspicuous for giving and receiving great

BARGAINS!

As a marked result of this, I illustrate the enormous and constant growth of my business. A buyer once sold to is a customer made, and in this manner each season's business shows an increase over the preceding one. Every person who does business with me knows that, whatever kind of goods I handle, I do it right beyond dispute.

NOTE.—If you have not already become one of my many customers, do so at once, for it certainly means dollars saved for you.
