Great Colliery Disaster.

HUNDREDS OF MINERS IN A DEATH TRAP.

BRUSSELS, March 11th.—An explosion occurred to-day at the Auderuis colliery. Tremendous excitement prevails in the vicinity of the pit. Of the 300 men at work only three have thus far arrived at the mouth of the pit in safety. The effect of the explosion was terrific. The cage and the ventilator at the mouth of the pit were shattered. The destruction of the ventilator adds an element of great danger to the situation.
The men, if any, who survive the shock of the explosion are apt to meet their death from the choke damp, as with the destruction of the ventilator it is impossible to rid the mine of the gases. A large number of the miners are married, and their families are at the pit's mouth, frantic with grief. Volunteers are plentiful, and almost super-human efforts are being made to clear the shaft.

Later particulars regarding the explosion show that it occurred in a gallery 400 feet below the surface. Here were working 270 men. Of this number 40 escaped by means of a second shaft, and 16 others were rescued in a terribly and, it is believed, fatally injured condition. It is feared that of the men in the mine 200 have been killed. The explosion occurred at 8 o'clock this morning. It was very heavy, and the shock caused by it resembled an earthquake. The ground for a large area in the vicinity of the colliery rocked and trembled for several seconds from the immense force exerted by the exploding gases. Houses were shaken to their foundations, windows were loudly rattled and smashed, and crockery and other articles of household ware were thrown about and broken. The residents of the place were paralyzed with fear while these disturbances lasted, but they soon realized what the nature of the trouble was, their experience with similar visitations telling them another of these heartrending fatalities which every mining town sooner or later experiences had occurred in their midst.
Almost before the tremblings caused by the mighty explosion had died entirely away, the inhabitants had begun to rush from their dwellings, and crowds of excited men, women and children, the faces of all blanched with the horror which possessed them, flocked to the mouth of the fatal pit, down which, but a few hours before, the miners had been lowered to begin their dreary and laborious work in the bowels of the earth.
Almost every family in the whole place had a relative or friend among the men employed in the mine, and not a person in all the mining settlement but experienced a thrill of fear for the safety of some loved one when ominous upheavals bore to their minds forebodings of their danger. The scene around the pit soon became one of great excitement and anguish. Piteous shrieks and cries resounded on every side, as it was at first thought that every one in the mine had been killed. Women in the surging crowd were especially loud in their languentations as they realized that the awful explosion would likely bereave them of husbands, sons, fathers, brothers or sweethearts. Just as soon as the overpowering and deadly fumes which had been rushing up the shaft in stifling volumes had been dissipated, and it was thought the pit could be entered with some degree of safety, a willing band of hundreds of brave men volunteered to descend into the abyss and commence the work of rescuing those of their companions, if any, who might have survived the disaster, or bearing the blackened and tora bodies of the killed to the surface. Arrangements were quickly completed for making a thorough search of all the chambers and galleries in the mine, and the first batch of rescuers were lowered down the shaft amid cheers and prayers from the bewailing women that their gallant efforts might result in restoring the imprisoned men to the arms of their families.

Out of 100 Indian students returned from Hampton Institute, Virginia, to the reservation only two have been failures.

The farmers in county Tyrone, Ireland, have sustained severe losses through the heavy snow storms that have prevailed there. Thousands of sheep have perished in the mountains.

A young man in Geneva County, Alabama, has been fined $150 for kissing a young woman against her will. As the defendant testified that he had kssed the plaintiff 150 times, the cost of his would amount to have averaged the round sum of $1.
