Henry Labouchere.

THE POLITICIAN AND JOURNALIST WHO NEVER FAILS TO ENTERTAIN.

"Labby's" arraignment of his old colleagues of the Liberal party in Great Britain has set everybody talking about him. "Member of Parliament," writing about the member for Northampton and his recent ebullition, says he must be regarded as a person of influence, whether he is considered as a journalist or a member of Parliament. In the latter capacity he is very industrious and familiar with all the forms of the House, a ready, though not polished speaker, and a most pertinacious opponent. He holds fast when he has once got his teeth in and there is no shaking him off. He generally manages to amuse the House, and, therefore, he is sure of obtaining a hearing. As a critic of expenditures on royal palaces, pensions, allowances, and similar charges he is fearless, and some would say reckless. He gives utterance to all the nastiest things he can think of, and nobody is too high or too low for his lash once he falls foul of anybody.

Then his power is increased by the fact that he is sole proprietor of Truth, which now has the largest circulation of all social papers. He has shown up a good many rascals and successfully resisted dozens of libel suits. He hits all round without caring for the consequences, and is master of that lively, rattling style of writing which is sure to find readers.

He makes his journal help him as a politician, while his politics act as a perpetual advertisement for his journal. In the House of Commons smoking room he is always the centre of a listening throng, for he never fails to be amusing.

Such a man generally gets into office when his party is in power, and when he does not the tempest raised by "Labby" is just what might have been expected.

An Energetic Duchess.

The best story of the Tyrone elections, writes "Ramblar" in the Tyrone Constitution, is that which is told of the Duchess of Abercorn's decision and resourcefulness in bringing two invalid Unionist voters to the poll late in the evening, when the only vehicle to be had for love (I had nearly said "or money," but that word cannot be used at election time) was the late Duke's state coach, at Baronscourt, which his Grace had used as Lord Lieutenant. Two horses had then to be got, and they were found working in a field near by. Then there wasn't a stitch of harness about the place. But her Grace remembered the old state harness which ornamented one of the rooms. This was put upon the horses, the grand old coach was attached, and then it was found that there was no coachman except the Duke—who declined to drive, as there is a ridiculous law about Peers having nothing to do with elections. The Duchess, however, got on the box, grasped the reins, and went off from Baronscourt determined—like Horace Greeley's coachman—to be "on time." Her Grace polled the latter of her two men at three minutes to eight, and as Lord Fredric's majority was known to be a small one, and might have been so small as to render the two votes of the most lively importance, the Duchess deserves every praise for her splendid decision, and successful action.

Butchery By Women.

La Pierre, Ind., Sept. 3.—Nicholas Geraty, an old farmer, quarrelled with his wife yesterday, and she went to the house of her married daughter, Mrs. Kerstang, who lived on an adjoining farm. Between 5 and 6 o'clock Geraty went over to the Kerstang place and asked his wife to return. She refused, and he tried to force to accompany him. Mrs. Kerstang knocked him down with an axe. Then while the wife held him down the daughter cut him to pieces with a butcher knife. Over 80 stab wounds were inflicted, and the face and neck were horribly slashed. The women washed themselves and tried to hide the body. They were discovered and arrested, and now it is feared they will be lynched.

Three sacks of registered letters, valued at £1,000,000, have been stolen from the railways between Paris and Lyons, France.

The Duke of Fife on the Land Question.

The Duke of Fife, while he has no sympathy, as he says, with agitators, who "have neither capital nor are willing to work," has some very decided views of his own on the land question, and these he enlarged upon at a luncheon given on the 9th ult., in connection with the Keith cattle show. His opinion is that the division of the county into properties of various sizes is more desirable than those solid overgrown estates which were the pride of a former generation. A wider distribution of land, he thinks, would tend to dispel class jealousies and promote national stability by giving a real interest in the soil to a large number of the community. The duke has been giving practical shape to this conviction of his by selling off some of his own ancestral property in the north of Scotland, and buying land in other parts of the country.

Number of Jews.

"The Jews," says a foreign correspondent, "are much more numerous and wealthy to-day than ever before in the world. In the days of the greatest prosperity and power of the Jewish kingdom, under David and Solomon, they probably did not number, all told, more than five million. Now they number considerably over twice as many. In Asia, their original home, there are not more than half a million, settled in Syria, Persia, Arabia, India and China. Perhaps half a million more are to be found in Africa, chiefly in Morocco, the descendants of those Jews who, in the year of Columbus's discovery of America, were expelled from Spain. A considerable contingent is to be found in America. But the chief modern home of the Jews is in Eastern and Central Europe, where they settled in the days of the crusades. At one time the kingdom of Poland contained nine-tenths of all the Jews in the world. Two years ago, there were in the Russian empire, chiefly in its Polish provinces, fully five million Jews. In the Polish provinces of Austria there are two million, and in Germany 750,000, and in the United States one million."—New York Sun.

A Disinfectant.

Mr. Van Ingan hands us the following press clipping, which may be of value when the cholera strikes us:

"It may not be amiss at the present time, when the public mind is so aroused with the fears of cholera, typhoid, etc., to lay before the people one of the best, if not the very best, of disinfectants known to science, and which can be made by anyone, and at a cost so trifling (less than 10 cents) that certainly places it within the reach of all. Moreover this disinfectant is so very unlike many disinfectants, it leaves no offensive odor after its use:— $\frac{1}{2}$ oz. nitrate of lead, $\frac{3}{4}$ oz. rock salt (common salt will do) dissolve the nitrate of lead with two gallons of rain water, dissolve the salt in a quart of rain water and mix both together—the disinfectant is then ready for use. Pour half a gallon down sink and closets, sprinkle a quart around the corners of cellars and a little, say a tea-cupful, round bedrooms and under beds; stables and outhouses according to size. A sponge well saturated and hung up in a room will disinfect in a few minutes."—Woodstock Sentinel-Review.

At Omaha, on Friday, Online, the Nebraska 2-year-old pacing wonder, went a mile in 2 17 on a half-mile track, beating the 2-year-old record of 2 24 made by Axtell.

Near Cato, Cayuga county, N. Y., a boy engaged in cutting bindings for a thresher accidentally cut the hand of the man who was feeding. The feeder caught up the lad and threw him into the cylinder, where he was ground to atoms. A brother of the boy promptly knocked the feeder down and stabbed him to death with a pitchfork before anyone could interfere.

Gilbert G. Rice accidentally intruded on one of the secret meetings of the striking miners in Tennessee. The miners suspected that he was a spy, tied him to a freight car and set the car going down grade. Rice was dragged at a fearful velocity, and in rounding a curve he was swung out so that the rope caught a telegraph pole and wound itself around it. The rope broke and Rice's life was saved, though the awful experience has reduced his weight 50 pounds and turned his hair grey.
