SNOW.—The weather for a few days past has been very cold, and on Wednesday morning there was a little snow, the first we have seen this fall. Coal, box and parlor stoves are being hustled up, and cooking-stoves, which have a good deal of leisure in summer, will soon be working full time. One of our villagers, who considers himself weather wise, says that winter will begin in earnest by the middle of November; but we hope he will prove to be mistaken, as long winters are hard on everybody, especially those who are very poor or in delicate health, though, of course, there ought to be sleighing for Christmas and New Year's.

NOTICE.—To those requiring our assistance in putting up stores, I would request that they have it done at once, as we possibly cannot attend to it later on in the season.—JOSEPH HEARD.

REAL BLACK.—Whether or not the squirrel mentioned in the Gazette two or three weeks ago was a faded black one or a half breed is still a disputed point; but a real Simon Pure, as black as the ace of spades, was lately caught on Mr. James Southam's farm in Verulam. It was first seen crossing a field by some boys, who of course immediately gave chase. Being closely pressed, the fugitive ran up one of the hind legs of a mare, who promptly kicked it off, and it then took refuge on a stump, from which it was knocked with a stone and captured, but was so little hurt that it was lively as a cricket a few minutes afterwards. What became of it we do not know.

On a Prospecting Jaunt.

On Wednesday afternoon (Sept. 28th) Hon. A. S. Hardy, Hon. R. Harecourt, Hon. C. F. Fraser, Hon. J. M. Gibson, accompanied by Mr. W. T. Hart, M. P., and Mr. J. R. Stratton, M. P., and officials of the railway took a trip over the Kingston, Napanee and Western Railway from Tweed to Deseronto. The paper mills, Portland cement works and other industries along the line were inspected. The party were afterwards the guests of Mr. E. W. Rathbun, of Deseronto. On Thursday the day was occupied in the inspection of the varied industries included in the Rathbun works, at Deseronto, which are a live example of the extreme application of the doctrine of utilitarianism. Absolutely nothing goes to waste, every portion of lumber or refuse is made use of—a block of wood the size of a visiting card is turned to account. Sawdust is distilled, producing alcohol for industrial purposes or combined with clay and converted into terra cotta building material. Even the smoke from the furnaces is subjected to "creative" processes, and valuable commercial products are the result. At the Rathbun's Deseronto establishment in the manufacture of a sawlog there is not enough waste to stop a clock.—Peterboro' Examiner.

Rare Sport With Spoon and Hook.

Last Thursday a party composed of Messrs. W. Carlwell and L. H. Terrill, town, Thos. Eastwood, the smiling proprietor of the Eastwood House, Buckhorn, and Charles Tobie, an Ludian guide, did a big day's fishing work. In Buckhorn Lake between the village and Deer Bay they caught, with trolling line and rods, 147 pounds of fine fish. The largest lunge weighed 18 lbs. and there were many fine specimens of bass also. This perhaps is the finest day's fishing ever done in the northern waters by a party of four men. And this is not the first good day's fishing Buckhorn Lake has seen this season, by any means. Fishing there is at its best at the present time.—Peterboro' Examiner.

J. W. Smith, who shot his wife and cut his child's throat in Colorado, was lynched the same evening. He thanked the crowd for doing it.

The proprietor of the Queen's Hotel, Roseneath, has been fined $23 70 for keeping the windows of his barroom covered with blinds, contrary to regulations of West Northumberland license commissioners.

A party of wealthy New Yorkers will charter a first-class ocean steamship shortly and start for a tour around the world. The vessel will be supplied with all the accessories of a club, and it is to be a sort of go-as-you-please tour.

Hard to Swallow.

A curious story is going the rounds on the papers. It appears that a Liverpool policeman thirteen years ago lost a sixpence, and thought he must have swallowed it. Last week he was seized with a severe fit of coughing, and suddenly the long lost coin re-appeared. It was worn to half its original thickness, which shows that food causes a considerable amount of friction in its passage to the stomach. A contemporary asks, "Why did he not have that fit of coughing years ago?" I know of two other similar stories. A year or two ago a woman lost her false teeth, and looked all over for them, but could not find them. Some time afterwards she began to go into a decline, and suffered severely from coughing and all the symptoms of pulmonary consumption. She went to a hospital where her lungs and throat were examined. To the surgeon's intense astonishment he thought he saw some gold at the back of her throat, and with considerable trouble extracted the long lost artificial teeth, which the poor woman never suspected she had swallowed. Another remarkable case was quoted in the British medical papers a few years since. A little girl was eating some plum cake at a Christmas party and was laughing heartily. She swallowed something accidentally, and henceforth suffered great pain. She became almost a skeleton, but her parents being wealthy, she had the best medical advice and attendance obtainable. All the symptoms pointed to pulmonary consumption, but one curious circumstance was that her breath always had an aromatic odor. After every violent fit of coughing a microscopic examination was made, when one day a minute portion of a clove was discovered. Strange to say, a few days after, a whole clove was ejected from her lungs after a violent fit of coughing, and henceforth, to the great joy of her parents, the child made rapid recovery. I have read somewhere of a woman swallowing a glass eye, which she kept in a cup of water. I am not aware that she was any worse. An alleged coiner the other day swallowed a lot of counterfeit shillings. This, however, is said to be a very common trick. Evidently there is no accounting for taste.

Planting Trees by Dynamite.

A Texas writer recommends the use of dynamite in preparing places for planting trees. The method is to sink a small hole, six or eight feet deep, by means of a sounding rod or otherwise, in the bottom of the excavation made to receive the tree, the dynamite and fuse are inserted and lighted as in blasting rock. The explosion loosens the soil and leaves it in condition to be easily penetrated by the roots of the tree when set. This plan is said to be extensively used in California. The expense is placed at 25 or 30 cents per tree, and is estimated to be only a fraction of the cost of loosening the soil to the same extent by hand labor. The results are claimed to be a growth in six years equal to an ordinary growth of ten years, and much earlier and more abundant fruitage.

There are oak trees in existence 1,000 years old.

A boy was blown to pieces and three men fatally injured by the explosion of a thrasher boiler at Indiana, Pa.

The police of Pesth, Hungary, believe that the alleged lunatic, Szecmerdy, who committed suicide in Pressburg after being arrested for a number of atrocious murders, was the wretch known as Jack-the-Ripper in London. They say that they have evidence that he was in London at the time of each and every murder attributed to Jack-the-Ripper. The lunatic at Pressburg, however, does not appear to have chosen fallen women for his victims, and he robbed people as well as murdered them.

Passengers in the sleeper attached to the Baltimore and Ohio express, which passed Newark, Ohio, at two o'clock on the morning of the 30th, complained of a peculiar noise under the car. The train was stopped, when a horrible discovery was made. A man named Henry Edwards was stealing a ride on the trucks. His body had fallen off, his feet catching and holding to the trucks, while his head was banged from the road bed to the bottom of the car for miles, being literally beaten off.

The people of Independence-avenue, Kansas City, a crowded thoroughfare, witnessed a horrible tragedy Saturday. Lee Ellington, a boy 16 years of age, was leading a horse to a water trough. He had tied the halter around his waist. The horse took fright and ran away, throwing the boy to the ground and dragging him at a terrible speed along the street. The horse had run two miles before he was stopped. The boy in the meantime had been killed, and his body had been reduced to a pulp.
