Two new slides have been put in and the slide channel narrowed from 34 to 27 feet, new walls and piers being built throughout, the cost of which is in the neighborhood of $1200. The workmanship of the job reflects great credit on the foremin, Mr. John Thomson, and his men.

BURNED TO DEATH. - About 2.30 last Friday morning two buildings in O nemee were destroyed by fire, and John McGowan, an old man who slept up-stairs in one of them was, sad to say, low-man's life! Outside in the immeburned to death. Deceased, who was a blacksmith by trade, will be remembered by many of our readers, as he formerly lived at the Falls and was in the employ of Greene & Ellis. The remains of McGowan's dog were found in the ruins close to those of his master.

ACCIDENT .- On Sunday evening, the Cream. 13th inst., while Mr. Wm. Waffle of this village was driving his cow into the stable she took a notion to run down the hill toward the road, and Mr. Waffl; at once gave chase, but was checked in his "downward career" by a clothes line which was stretched across the yard. The line caught him under the chin, and, owing to the speed at which he was running, threw him about 15 feet way on his back, where he lay for some time unable to rise. He was well enough to be down town on Monday, Int was very stiff and sore, and his neck, from one ear to the other and over an inch wide, was skinned and presented the appearance of a large burn. We congratulate Mr. Waffl: on his escaping so well, as a case is on record a few years ago where a man had his neck broken in just the same manner.

A LONG IMPRISONMENT .- A few days ago threshers were at work at Mr. John Cook's in the township of Verulam; and. when the last of the barley that had been piled in one of the bays of the harn was removed, a duck was found. not only alive, but fat and hearty. The belief is that it had been there about three months, as there appeared to be no way by which it could have got in after the bay was filled. As the bird was against the outer wall of the barn, which was not battened, there was no lack of light or nic, and by crushing up the heads of barley it could get plenty to eat; but how it lived so long without water is a mystery. Some think that the barley straw must have been damp when it was stowed away, and that the her from suffering very badly from thirst.

the sixth, Mr. Geo. Whissile, got home | ed and fired in self defence.

on Tuesday, bringing with him three deer and part of the carcase of another. The party at first camped near Trout Lake, where they had good sport, killing seven deer by the morning of the 10th; but on that day they shifted their ground, which proved to be a mistake, as they got no more. Two of the deer were shot by Mr. Whissile, two by Mr. Jones, one by Mr. Edwards, one by Mr. Avery and one, a big buck, by Charlie Edwards. Part of the venison was eaten in camp, part was given to farmers who helped them over portages, and the remainder was divided amongst the huntsmen and their friends at the Falls, a good big chunk-for which the donors will accept our hearty thanks-finding its way to the Gazette office.

A Human Were-Wolf.

LONDON, Eng., Nov. 11th .- London Truth publishes the following pen picture of the court where Neill was convicted :

A dim, dingy, cockpit-looking hall, Sunday, the 20th inst., conducted by dear Lady Betty, with a raised bench the pastor, Rev. D N. McCamus, and running along one end, an ample dock his brother, Rev. J. A. McCamps of and an overhanging gallery at the other, usual hour and every night during the site to these and beneath the only winweek at 7. 30 p. m. Everybody made dows through which struggles the light of day an antiquated jury box containing 12 men, the very image of the waxworks in Mme. Tussaud's Chamber of Horrors.

In the well, rows of long tables covered with briefs and rows of low forms covered with lawyers. The atmosphere stifling In the dock a human werewolf, tall, square-built, with a bald, angular-east skull, low forehead, a squint partially concealed by gold-rimmed glasses, and incessantly grinding his under jaw as he stares through the man. He conveys a general impression of vulgar profligacy and disease, combined with the outward indications of middle class respectability. I could pick out a dozen others like him in the Strand at any hour of the day.

To the extreme right of the bench, the judge-a cold, deliberate, experienced man of the world, arrayed in a theatrical scarlet robe, a little gray crimped wig, and protected by a high strip of scarlet cushion at the back. Along the platform to the left of him a row of aldermen, fat, thin, short and tail, looking supremely grotesque in their tawdry costumes of silk, fur and frippery. Also two or three sporting peers, a flaneur, and a commission agent A. round on every side a dense mob of half stifled spectators. Women, members of the Bryswater Hysterical Brigade, who mistake morbid interest for intelligence, with broad felt hats, wavy feathers, heavy features and solid brocades. Idle men, attracted by idle curiosity to witness two men fight for a feldiate approaches petty officials cadging for gratuities and granting admission to the court for shillings and haif crowns!

soned Matilda Clover and other girls, was hanged at Newgate at 9 o'clock on Tuesday morning. Being a very light man, he was given a drop of over five feet, and the opinion is that death was instantaneous. He walked firmly and calmly to the gallows, and a deadly pallor of his features was the only symptom of emotion. He wade no confession.
