Good News.

A telegram from London brings the good news that Mr. Gardner, chairman of the Board of Agriculture, has given a pledge on behalf of the Imperial Government that Canadian cattle will again be allowed to land in England and Ireland as soon as it shall be proved that the Dominion is free from pleuro-pneumonia. The Scotch farmers wish to have the scheduling rescinded at once, maintaining that the Canadian cattle slaughtered on suspicion were all free from the disease; but, on the other hand, the farming clubs are trying to procure the passage of an act ordering all foreign cattle, whether healthy or diseased, to be slaughtered as soon as landed. It is not, however, at all likely that they will succeed, as our High Commissioner has requested the Canadian authorities to have the necessary inspection made and the proof of the Dominion's freedom from the disease forwarded to London. If, therefore, the oft repeated assertion that there is no pleuro-pneumonia among the cattle of this country prove to be correct, there can be but little doubt that the embargo against them will be at once removed, which will also remove a load of anxiety from the minds of raisers and shippers of Canadian "stockers."

Death of Jay Gould.

Jay Gould, the "multi-millionaire" as one paper calls him, died at his home in New York on Friday morning last in the 56th year of his age. He was a poor man's son, but by dint of industry, strict attention to speculation and an extraordinary financial genius that resulted from a combination of pre-natal circumstances over which he had no control, he became in the course of time boss of about 13,000 miles of railway, and the possessor of more money or its equivalent than has often been earned—no, acquired—by any one man. His wealth is estimated at from sixty to one hundred millions of dollars, but that he was any happier than ordinary men with good health and in comfortable circumstances is much to be doubted. He was a little man with a big head, but it is nowhere alleged that he had a big heart also, and, if he had, he very seldom gave any evidence of it in the way of charities or benefactions. The chief thing we have ever heard of to his credit is that he did not object to one of his sons marrying a poor girl, which shows that he was aware that there are other things besides money worth having. His devotion to the acquisition of wealth was, however, so great that he injured his health by overwork and died of pulmonary consumption in his prime, retiring underground twenty or thirty years earlier than he probably would have done had he retired from business when he was worth twenty or thirty millions of dollars. He left a name at which other speculators grow pale, "to point a moral or adorn a tale," and this is what the English papers say of him: LONDON, Ont., Dec. 3.—In commenting on the death of Jay Gould, The News says:—"It was Mr. Gould's ambition to be the richest man in the world, but he died disappointed. The Vanderbilts, Astors and Rockefellers head him. Yet all honor to the greatest money maker of any age or clime.

He was less a man than a machine for churning wealth. Napoleon's combinations were never vaster, and there were many points of resemblance between the two men. It will be impossible to explain one phase of civilization without a frequent mention of Gould's name, therefore he is sure of a place in history."

The Chronicle, in recounting the career of men whom Gould is said to have ruined, calls him the pest of society, a dynamiter of finance, a man possessing a power that the czars might envy, with the ethics of the alligator.

The Times says:—"Mr. Gould's death means the removal of a disturbing influence of vast and incalculable force. The man and the position he held were products of American life. Such a career could hardly have been possible elsewhere than in America. Money is raised in America to a rank higher than it can usefully occupy, owing to the absence of class distinctions."

The Standard says:—"No honest biographer can adhere to the maxim, 'deal charitably with the dead' when this wrecker of industries and impoverisher of men comes up for judgement. It is impossible to point to a single enterprise that he benefited, or to a solitary act of self sacrifice on his part. It would be affectation to pretend that the world is made poorer by his departure."

Correspondence of the Gazette.

Mr. Wm. Taublin & Co., of Mariposa are in this locality thrashing clover. They expect about a week's work here.

There have been several buyers through this part buying both lean and fat pork, and farmers are getting fair prices.

THE RINK.—Since this time last week the skating rink has been shingled, both sides and one end closed in and eight of the thirty window frames have been made and put in their places. The dressing rooms are yet to be built and other work to be done, but nine men besides Mr. Thomson work every day as long as they can see, and it is thought that the rink will be finished by the end of next week.

A Business Education Pays.

Any young woman or man can secure a free business education at one of the best colleges in Canada. It will only cost you one cent for particulars. Address The News, Kingston, Ont.

WOOD WANTED.—Last winter sleighing broke up so suddenly that several of our country subscribers who promised to bring wood to the Gazette office were prevented from doing so; but another fall of snow will make sleighing good enough to enable them to redeem their promises, and we hope they will do so, as we have very little fuel left and don't want to pay cash for a commodity of which so much is coming to us.

Three weeks from to-morrow is Xmas Eve. You just have three weeks in which to pick out your Xmas presents, of which W. T. Junkin has the largest and best selected stock ever opened in Fenelon Falls. Don't think of buying elsewhere till you see them.

ACCIDENT.—Mr. Edward Lansfield has been limping around since yesterday week, and will limp for some days longer, from the effects of a commercial traveller's iron-bound trunk, weighing about 300 lbs., slipping as he was moving it from the top of another trunk and falling on his left foot. Hal the trunk fallen much farther, his foot would, of course, have been smashed, instead of being badly bruised.

JOHNSTON & SISSON,

29. The Great Shoe Men of Lindsay

WINTER.—Although there is no telling what a day may bring forth in the shape of weather, we think it safe to assert that winter has set in considerably earlier than usual, as there has been skating for some little time and several light falls of snow have made pretty fair sleighing. The mercury has two or three times been down to within a few degrees of zero, but the weather as a rule has been mild, and we hope it may remain so all winter.

PROMPT PAYMENT.—Amongst those who were burnt out by the fire in this village on the morning of the 18th ult. were Messrs. John A. Ellis and Frank Magee and the Mechanics' Institute. All were insured in the Northern Insurance Co. of London and Edinburgh. On the Tuesday after the fire the claims were adjusted, and on the following Saturday, the eighth day after the fire, the cheques for the respective amounts were received by Mr. James Arnold, the agent for the company in Fenelon Falls. Such remarkably prompt payment needs no comment—it speaks for itself.

A COMING TREAT.—The Ethel Armstrong Company, now on its first Canadian tour, will give a concert in Dickson's hall on the evening of Tuesday next, the 13th inst., under the auspices of the Fenelon Falls Masonic Lodge. The company consists of Ethel Arm-
