Showing The Cloven Foot.

The "true inwardness" of the P. P. A.—which is just what we thought it was—has been shown in all its hideousness in the village of Southampton, Ont., where there is a large tannery owned by the firm of Bowman & Zinkan and employing about seventy men. In addition to a tannery and other places of business, the village has a place of discord 'cept a P. P. A. lodge, which met last Friday night and ordered about twenty-five of its members, who are employed in the tannery, to strike on Saturday morning unless the foreman, Mr. McDermott, who is a Roman Catholic, was dismissed. They struck accordingly; but, though Mr. Zinkan is a P. P. A-ster he doesn't believe in being dictated to in business matters by the lodge, and the upshot of the strike was that the firm, instead of discharging the foreman, who was deservedly popular with themselves and the men, promptly sacked five of the ring-leaders who had threatened to shoot the book-keeper if he attempted to kindle a fire under the boiler, and the other hands, thinking better of the matter, went to work again. In view of the absence of intolerance from the published platform of the order and the meek mouthings of its orators, we fancy the little lodge at Southampton will get a wiggling from the great big grand lodge for thus letting the cat out of the bag, as it were, at so inopportune a period; and all who are not in accord with the P. P. A. will ironically cheer the lodge at Southampton for allowing its zeal to outrun its discretion. The association has at last shown the cloven foot most unmistakably, and not a few members who have been inveigled into it under false pretences are already showing a disposition to kick their way out of it again.

Distinguished Visitors.

The Orange Grand Lodge of Canada met this week in Lindsay, and on Wednesday nearly 500 of the members thereof excorted to Sturgeon Point and Fenelon Falls under the auspices of "Major Samuel Hughes, M. P.," who, when the Crandella arrived here about 3.30 p. m., was exhibiting himself upon one of the paddle-boxes, which was the highest point he could attain without mounting to the roof of the upper cabin or climbing up the smokestack. But Bro. Sam failed for once to make himself the cynosure of all eyes and the centre of attraction, for were there not in the crowd bigger men than he—E. F. Clarke, of Toronto, the new Grand Master, N. Clarke Wallace, the ex-ditto, and Orange notables from east, west, north and south all over this wide Dominion. But Sam was admitted to a footing of ostensible equality by all of them, and it was great fun to see and hear him advertise the fact by running after the cabinet minister and bawling out "Clarke Wallace! Clarke Wallace!" whenever they got separated in the crowd. Our M. P. is taller and more symmetrical than the late Grand Master and he would be called the handsomer man of the two, but the strong facial resemblance between them was noticed by many, both having the same look of insolent conceit—the same ungentlemanly expression, if we may so term it.

The visiting brethren being accompanied by the citizen's band and a five and drum band from Lindsay, and the Fenelon Falls band contributing its quota of party tunes, it was like the afternoon of the 12th of July; but it didn't last long, for the Crandella's whistle was calling them to re-embark before 5 o'clock, and it was too bad that S. H. didn't arrange to give them more time at the capital of his riding; though the fault wasn't altogether his, as the boat would have been here somewhat earlier but for the logs in the river. An hour is not enough, nor are two or three hours either, to view the attractions of our village, which are scattered over a wide area and some of which can be best seen from the top of a high hill. However, the visitors marched up from the landing to the village, saw the waterfall (second only to Niagara's) and what little besides they had time to see, and then marched down again; and it was there, a few minutes before the boat left, that Mr. Clark Wallace, one of the members of the Dominion Government, was guilty of a piece of coarse impertinence that will appear incredible to those who know his position without knowing the man. Stepping in front of one of the many pretty girls for whom Fenelon Falls is famous, and putting his face (cigar in mouth) within a short distance from hers, he deliberately said: "Won't you come up to Lindsay with us?" to which question the astonished young lady—not knowing him and thinking he was some half drunken ignoramus—laughingly replied in the negative. The incident of course provoked much comment, and there are not wanting those who think that it is the bounden duty of Sam Hughes, as the representative of the riding and a 'squire of dames, either to lick Clarke Wallace or bring the matter up on the floor of the House. Now we think of it, Mr. Wallace is Controller of Customs, and if it is one of his customs to address young ladies to whom he has not been introduced, the sooner he begins to control it the better. Possibly he thought, in the excess of his vanity, that so great a man as himself must have been pointed out to everybody, and that a few words from his august lips, even though insultingly familiar, would be considered an honor by any person to whom he might condescend to address them.

The Red Mill.

About thirty men have been busy for some weeks past "fixing up" the red mill, but on Saturday the number was reduced to twenty, as the greater part of the rough carpenter work is done. A carload of machinery arrived last week and a second on Wednesday last, and if the remainder comes as fast as it can be put into place, the mill will be at work by the 1st of July, or possibly a little earlier. Mr. J. W. Howry, one of the members of the firm, was here this week and was greatly pleased with the rapid progress Mr. Thomson and his men were making with the work. Mr. L. H. Swan from Toledo, Ohio, who is to be superintendent of the yard and sell and collect payment for the lumber, came to the Falls with Mr. Howry. The company have about 150,000 logs mixed with, say, 50,000 belonging to other lumbermen, scattered along the waterway between Cameron lake and Gooderham, and on Monday morning, a cooking-stove and a lot of provisions were sent across the lake to the mouth of the river, where seven or eight men are now posted to sort the logs, a few of which have, we hear, already arrived. There are some pretty tight jams at different places along the route, but nothing to what there would have been but for the late abundant rain, without which the lumbermen would have been put to serious inconvenience and probable loss.
