Strengthening Britain's Navy.

FEELING OF RELIEF AT EQUIPMENT OF MERCANTILE MARINE.

LONDON, Oct. 1.—There is a real feeling of relief that the Government has decided to do something toward equipping the mercantile marine, and that some of the fleetest steamers running between England and America will be among the first to receive naval reserve crews. Nothing, however, is said about providing these steamers with armaments. The French and Russian mercantile fleets carry both men and arms, and it is stated that Russia has also made arrangements with certain American companies by which in case of war six fast vessels can be sent to Vladivostock, where guns and stores are kept for them. The armaments for the British subsidized mercantile fleet have hitherto been kept at Devonport, Woolwich, Hong Kong and Sydney.

A Queer Jury.

THEY EVIDENTLY DID NOT KNOW THEIR OWN MINDS.

TORONTO, Sept. 29.—Mr. E. B. Johnson of this city was counsel for the defence in a peculiar case tried at the Orangeville Assizes. David Fairweather, aged 29, sued the Owen Sound Stone Company for $10,000 damages for the loss of his sight while in the company's employ. On Nov. 29, 1892, Fairweather's eyes were destroyed while removing a charge from a hole in the rock that had failed to explode. Before the jury retired Judge Meredith submitted several questions to them to answer. When they returned to court after four hour's absence, they gave a verdict in favor of the plaintiff for $2,500, but failed to answer the questions submitted. When asked by the judge why they had failed to do so the foreman said they had not seen any questions. His Lordship then handed the draft questions to the jury and asked them to retire again and bring in the answers. They remained out an hour this time, and when they returned, to the first question, "Do you consider the company in any way responsible for the accident," answered "no." This, of course, knocked out the $2,500 verdict, and the action was dismissed with costs.

Dishonest Debtors.

It is a serious thing when the tide turns against a man in business. But it is a still more serious thing when the merchant thus placed resorts to dishonest practices in order that out of the wreck he may save unto himself the lion's share, leaving the remains for his creditors to gather up. One of the methods commonly practised for accomplishing this end is the transference by the insolvent—yes, and by the solvent, too—of real estate to his wife. Sometimes the court defeats these little games. We had an evidence of this in Toronto last week.

Joseph Dilworth carried on for a number of years a, seemingly at least, successful retail drug business in King street. Not satisfied with his drug business alone, he started a so-called wholesale grocery warehouse in Front street, still retaining his drug business. The "wholesale grocery warehouse" is alleged to have been nothing short of a supply house for the Patrons. At any rate, as a wholesale grocer, Mr. Dilworth's career was comparatively brief. In a word, he failed; and dragged down with him his drug business, but the building in which the drug business was carried on he tried to save by conveying it to his wife. Against this the creditors demurred. And last week the courts sustained them, declaring the transfer fraudulent and void. It is, however, fair to state that Mrs. Dilworth had a claim for $4,300 against her husband's estate, which the court allowed.

The man who conveys any part of his assets to his wife or anybody else is a thief, and the law should treat him as such; but the trouble is he is looked upon more as an acute financier than what he really is, an appropriator of other men's goods. The law should do with the man who attempts to defraud his creditors out of $4,000 the same as it would with the man who steals $4: Put him in jail.—Hardware.

Ratte, the Montreal smuggler, has been found guilty of smuggling furs into the United States, and sentenced at Buffalo to a fine of $200 and a year in Erie county penitentiary.
