Troubled Tories.

The disaffection of D'Alton McCarthy and the treasonable talk of Clarke Wallace have rendered it extremely difficult for Tories, especially Orangemen, to decide what it is best to say under all the circumstances, and the utterances of some of them are very amusing. Sam Hughes says that Mr. McCarthy is "making himself a tool of the Jesuites"; the Midland Free Press says: "The position he (Dalton McCarthy) has created is an absurdity crowned with caps and bells"; and the Minden Echo says that Clarke Wallace's Kingston utterances in favor of a rebellion in Ireland were "the very essence of loyalty to the Protestant Throne of Great Britain." Others there be that see things in a different light, and among them is Mr. Wm. Graham, tonorial artist of Toronto and formerly a resident of Fenelon Falls, who at the last election travelled all the way from the city of his adoption to somewhere out back to cast a vote for Sam Hughes. His present opinion of the late objects of his political adoration is thus given in a recent number of the evening Star: "William Graham, who runs a barber shop near Bloor street, which is the resort of the Equal Righters and P. P. A.'s, was met in Lennox's hotel, North Toronto, last night and spoke very fiercely about Clarke Wallace and the rest of the 'gang' who support him. Among those who get a shave or a haircut at Graham's are Frank Somers, Ned Clarke, Bob Birmingham, Major Bennett, Billy Bell and other prominent 'liners,' but they aren't in it any more. Graham has jumped the traces and is no longer a tug horse.

"When I think," said Mr. Graham, "that it was our votes which put Clarke Wallace, Mackenzie Bowell, Sam Hughes and some more into Parliament, I feel so sore I could beat myself. But they'll never get there again, never. At Orangeville last week we would have beaten Wallace easily had it not been for the leaders, but when the next general election comes the man whom we will put up will drive Wallace into the mud of West York. Its money he's after, not principle," and Mr. Graham ran out to catch a car bound south."

A Male Professional Beauty.

The inordinate vanity of Major Sam Hughes, in obedience to the prompting of which he has deluged the riding with photos of himself in his fighting clothes, has caused papers far and near to poke fun at him, and now comes the Montreal Witness, which says: "Mr. Hughes is, we believe, in point of personal appearance, quite a handsome man, and he has accordingly set up as a sort of political professional beauty, whose charms are capable of winning for him new admirers and confirming old ones." The Witness has been misinformed; the M. P. for North Victoria is not a handsome man, though we admit that he is a rather fine looking animal. He has a dark and dour countenance suggestive of "treason, stratagems and spoils," and, bad as is the expression of his eyes, some of the expressions of his mouth are a great deal worse. There are heaps of handsomer men than Sam Hughes in this county, and one of them is "Charley" Fairbairn, M. P. for South Victoria.

Preparing to Rebel.

A special correspondent of the London, Eng., Daily Telegraph, who has been investigating in Bellast and its vicinity says:—

"Under strict pledges I was permitted to attend a drill of a certain urban loyal club. The instructor was an ex-army sergeant. In a well guarded building I found myself face to face with over 100 sturdy citizens, mostly of the working class. I looked on while the company, a fourth of whom had rifles, were put through squad and company drill for two hours. The sections were alternately put through the various evolutions usually imparted to recruits, the movements being smartly but quietly performed. The men showed that they had some previous training. I thought they would compare favorably with many volunteer company drills I had seen in Great Britain. I had chats with many of the men during the intervals, and found they had joined to drill to be prepared for the worst, as they put it. They meant nothing short of fighting rather than accept the home rule bill. After a few admonitory words from the instructor and their leader the men dispersed to their homes in groups. The drilling goes on three nights a week, a fresh section of the organization being put through by other ex-army men. I was told that the organization consisted of 750 effectives, and it was intended to increase it to 1000. Every man had weapons, but it was thought advisable not to bring them out, a few only being used for drill purposes. Battalion drill is to be held shortly in the open, under conditions such as to give freedom from observation, when 500 men will fall into line for practice in field evolutions."

From the above, the ultra-Protestants of Ulster are bigger fools than we took them to be; that is, if they are really earnest and intend to tear their loyalty up by the roots and raise the standard of rebellion if the home rule bill be passed. Of course, unless they are "outen their heads," they cannot expect to achieve anything except their own undoing by armed resistance; and very probably history will repeat itself and their discretion instead of their valour will be in the ascendant when the time for shooting and being shot at shall have arrived. To be sure, Sam Hughes has promised to appear in Ulster with a contingent, and N. Clarke Wallace has thrown out an insinuation that he will be on hand with another; but the British Government will be provided against contingents as well as contingencies, and the two heroic Cauucks and their misguided dupes will find themselves behind prison bars, or lying around out of doors weltering in their gore, if they carry out their threat of going over to Ireland and helping to raise a disturbance.

Newcastle Loses an old Resident.

The following paragraph under the above heading appeared in the Toronto papers on Wednesday:—

NEWCASTLE, Ont., April 4.—One of our most respected and esteemed residents, Mr. Frederick Farncomb, is dead. Mr. Farncomb was born in London, Eng., 67 years ago. He came to Canada at the age of 24 and settled in Newcastle, where he has since resided. He was postmaster of this place for five years and was collector of customs for 25 years. By his death the Church of England here has sustained a loss which is almost irreparable, as he was one of her most prominent members, having served as warden for over 25 years. He leaves a wife and six children to mourn his death. His family consists of one daughter and five sons. Three of the sons are ministers and the other two are doctors.

The Rev. Wm. Farncomb of Fenelon Falls, one of the deceased gentleman's sons, was to have gone to Newcastle on Monday, but owing to an accident to the train, which delayed it about two hours, he did not leave here until Tuesday. We are glad, however, to here that he reached his father's bedside in time to exchange a last farewell.

Railway Accident.

Last Monday morning when the regular train from the north was within about a mile of the station at the Falls, a box car was upset and partly thrown from the track in consequence of one of the hind axles breaking close to the wheel, which was found under the hind truck of the next car, where it had dragged for about a third of a mile over the ties, nine hundred of which were more or less damaged, and very few of them left fit for service. Nobody was hurt, but as the two cars in front of the wrecked one were full of wood, the passengers had to ride on the roofs, or on the tender, or in the cab the short remaining distance to the Falls. An auxiliary train with a derrick, some car trucks, a few rails, a lot of tools, and a gang of men arrived from Lindsay about noon, and a little before 5 o'clock the track was ready for the train from the south, which was delayed less than an hour. The work was watched by a number of our villagers who had never seen the like before, to whom it was very interesting. Mr. Ferguson, the road master, who superintended the operation, said the accident would cost the Company about $1,000.

MATRIMONIAL.—On Wednesday evening, March 29th, St. Peter's church, Verulam, was the scene of one of those pleasant events that come as a matter of course, when Bella, eldest daughter of Mr. Richard Lamb, was joined in wedlock to Mr. George Wolf by the Rev. Mr. Farncomb of Fenelon Falls. The ceremony was performed in the presence of some twenty invited guests. The bride was assisted through the trying ordeal by her sister Jessie, and Mr. John Dunsheath ably supported the groom. The ceremony being over, the company returned to the residence of the bride's father, where all partook of a sumptuous tea, after which several hours were spent in music and social chat. The great array of handsome, costly and useful presents amply testified to the bride's popularity. We extend congratulations.
