

The Arizona Kicker.

SOME BOOK REVIEWS BY ITS ENERGETIC LITERARY MAN.

We are in receipt of a new publication entitled "Did She Marry For Money?" As near as we can make out she did, but she got beautifully left. After keeping an old man bobbing around for five years, Lucille hears that he has come into possession of an even million. She then tells him that her love has always been his and hurries up the wedding. The honeymoon is only a week old when her husband is sued for a laundry bill, and it transpires that he isn't worth a red. The book leaves Lucille scattered over the floor in a dead faint, and we are not going to bring her to and ask questions. Let her turn to tapestry painting, and make an old man's life happy.

According to our office scales, the book entitled "The Love of Theodore" weighs just 24 ounces. We can't find out that Theodore's love was anything to brag of, and the fact that he loved for 13 long years before saying anything about it does not recommend him to our estimation. A young man who loves a girl so that he can't sleep nights, and yet permits her to make artificial flowers for 30 cents a day and attempt suicide nine different times, should be chained up to a Digger Indian. The book leaves her clasped tightly to his bosom; but, in spite of his long love, he may have found some other excuse to stand her off. We can't conscientiously recommend the book.

A book which will appeal largely to western sentiment is entitled "Found at Last." The daughter of a New York millionaire has had 40 offers of marriage. She knows that every one of the 40 young men simply wanted her cash. She determines that whoever gets her shall get her through love, and she packs her trunk and goes west and pretends to be poor. She strikes a job of teaching school at $6 a month and board, and after about six months along comes Popsy Harrison, a young man in a red shirt, who is head boss in a saw-mill. He says "Gosh hang it!" and she says "Gosh hang it!" and he wipes his mouth with his handkerchief, but he loves her for herself, and she gives him her heart and a stack of government bonds as big as a house. Things ought to always come out that way, and we hope the book will have a large sale. M. QUAD.

Times are Changed.

"How's this?" said the farmer who was reading a letter from his son at college. "Come here, Betsey. Harold Howard Augustus writes home that he wants money to pay his fencing bill. What on airth does the boy mean?" "I s'pose it's the college pastur or somethin, Matthew. There's so many pernicketty things the poor boys at college have to do." "Ho, he! It's lessons, fencing he wants to pay for. What, now, that do beat all. I've been fencing for 40 year, and I never had to go to college to learn how." "But times air changed, Matthew. Fences ain't made as they was when we clim'ed them in Root hollow." "I expect that's so," said the old man thoughtfully. "He don't say whether it's a rail fence or a wire one, but I reckon he'll learn both ways. But I never thought a boy of mine would have to go to college to learn fencing. Times are changed."

Scotch Terseness and Thrift.

In a dull Scottish village on a dull morning one neighbor called upon another. He was met at the door by his friend's wife, and the conversation went thus:
"Cauld?"
"Aye."
"Gaen to be weety, I think."
"Aye."
"Is John in?"
"Oh, aye; he's in."
"Can I see him?"
"No."
"But I wanted to see him."
"Aye; but you cannae see him. John's dead."
"Deid?"
"Aye."
"Sudden?"
"Aye."
"Very sudden."
"Very sudden."
"Did he say anything about a dot of green paint before he died?"

An Illustration in Point.

"Right ahead of us," resumed the traveler who was narrating his experience, "yawned the mountain pass."
"Do you know," artlessly interrupted one of the younger women in the company, "that seems very queer to me? How can a mountain yawn?"
"Did you never see Cumberland Gap, miss?" he asked.
"And there were no more interruptions."

Fickle Fashion's Fleeting Fancies, to those who would follow faithfully in her footsteps, are frequently a source of bewilderment—sometimes of annoyance. Few there are who do not to some extent pay attention to the changes of fashion. The contour of the fashionable figure has undergone a decided change during the past few months. The tight sleeve has been found wanting, and we are returning to the full-sleeve again. So our head dress-maker informs us, and she keeps thoroughly posted. We are always up-to-date and a few days ahead.

If you want anything in the dressmaking line you will find that your chances of being suited here, both as to fit, finish, style and price, are as good as elsewhere. Prices for cutting and fitting away down. Our reputation for promptness and satisfaction in this branch merely requires that we call your attention to it. Remember, you are not trying an experiment when leaving your goods and order here.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. A postmaster is required to give notice by letter (returning the paper does not answer the law), when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office and state the reasons for its not being taken. Any neglect to do so makes the postmaster responsible to the publisher for payment.

2. If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether it is taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until the payment is made.

3. Any person who takes a paper from the post-office, whether directed to his name or another, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay.

4. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post-office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.

5. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.
