

She Knew Him.

WHY HIS EFFORTS TO SQUARE HIMSELF
FELL TO THE GROUND.

The little hours had crawled up to the comb of the roof of night and fallen over until three of them were rolling down the far side toward the eaves of morning, when a solitary footman might have been seen slipping into his own house with his shoes in his hand.

How needless, oh, how needless are oftentimes the devices of man! How nugatory and void are oftentimes his most painstaking efforts!

His wife was wide awake and waiting for him when he entered the sanctified seclusion of their apartment.

"I was so afraid of waking you, dear," he stammered, as he let the shoes fall from his nerveless grasp to the floor with a couple of dull thuds so close together they seemed as one.

She asked him in a stone-cold voice where he had been to be getting in at that time of night.

He thanked heaven for an opportunity to explain, and he told her a harrowing tale of business and delayed trains and telephones out of order and telegraph wires down and no messengers, that would have moved a heart of marble.

She never said a word as she looked straight at him.

"Do you doubt me?" he said, as if indignant at the implied suspicion in her silence, and then pleadingly: "Do you doubt me? Oh, Mary, how can you?"

Her eyes softened, and the fixity of her eyes relaxed.

"No, William," she responded almost gently. "No; I do not doubt you. At first there might have been some doubt in my mind, but now, thank heaven, there is none! Not a shadow, William, and I'm as sure that you are lying as that you are standing before me!"

Then William bowed his head in shame and turned up the gas—at her request—so she could get a better look at him.—Washington Star.

Wasted Economy.

"A little over one year ago," said Smithson, "I made up my mind that I was smoking too much. It didn't seem to affect my health in the least, but I thought it was a foolish waste of money, and I decided to give it up."

"A very sensible idea, indeed," remarked Brownlow. "So I thought at the time. I figured out, as closely as I could, how much I had been spending each day for cigars and tobacco. That sum I took each day and started a bank account with it. I wanted to be able to show just exactly how much I had saved by not smoking."

"And how did it work?" inquired Brownlow.

"At the end of 12 months I found that I had £55 in the bank."

"Good! Could you lend me?"
"And a few days later," interrupted Smithson—"last Thursday, in fact—the bank failed. You haven't got a cigar about your clothes, have you?"—London Fun.

Depends Upon the Point of View.

"I have always looked at dentistry," the surgeon was saying, "as a higher branch of the mechanic arts, but it isn't a profession. What does a dentist do? He works in teeth. He is merely a skilled mechanic."

"I never could see," observed the dentist, "why surgery is considered a profession. What does a surgeon do? He works simply in flesh and bones. He's a thirty-third degree butcher."

Whereupon a physician joined them, and both agreed in saying he was nothing more than a glorified hospital nurse.—Chicago Tribune.

No Use For a Study.

There is a good deal of point in a little story that I read in French the other day—a point that pricks American men of the class who have their own houses, as well as Frenchmen. A man is getting himself up a new house, and he and his wife are considering plans. One of these plans is favored by the wife.

"Well, I should like this plan very well," says the husband, "but I don't quite see where I am going to get myself in a study."

"A study!" exclaimed the wife. "What do you want of a study? You don't smoke!"—Boston Transcript.

Giles—Pshaw! That's nothing. I have an uncle who has lived for nearly 40 years on water.

Miles—Impossible!

Giles—Not at all. He's a sea captain.

Wickwire—Look here! This is the fourth time this morning you have been in here asking me for the price of a meal.

Dismal Dawson—Yep. I am the ab-solutely model beggar, don't yo know.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. A postmaster is required to give notice by letter (returning the paper does not answer the law), when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office and state the reasons for its not being taken. Any neglect to do so makes the postmaster responsible to the publisher for payment.
2. If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether it is taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until the payment is made.
3. Any person who takes a paper from the post-office, whether directed to his name or another, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay.
4. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post-office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.
5. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.
