The Hollowness of Charity.

The Honorable Samuel Blake is a versatile character. He can be found on the political platform pleading for politicians who should be in prison, and he can be found preaching at the Central Prison to prisoners who should be free men. He can be found at the Legislature or in the law courts of injustice pleading for special legislation for soulless corporations, and he can be found preaching from city pulpits, trying to save the souls of individuals whose lives are blasted by those same corporations. He opposes Sunday cars, and drives out on Sunday in his handsome carriage driven by a coachman who works seven days a week. The Honorable Samuel is a typical product of present day "civilization." As a pleader he excels, and as a well-known Y. M. C. A. worker he officiated at a recent meeting in the West End Y. M.
C. A., the object of the meeting being to decrease the debt of $30,000 which that institution owes. The pleading commenced, and Chester Massey, president of the Massey-Harris Company, headed the list with a pledge of $5,000, other members of the Massey family pledging an additional $5,000. The pleading continued, and the pledges were reduced to amounts of $1,000, then $500, and finally $100. Then something happened. The pleader turned to one gentleman, saying: "That is your size, is it not?" Slowly shaking his head, the man replied: "No, my hundred is included in that first five thousand." There was a grist of hidden meaning in those few words. The man was an employee of the Massey-Harris factory, and had helped to produce the $5,000 which Mr. Massey was receiving the credit of giving. Mr.
Massey was giving away money that had been wrung from his overworked and underpaid employees. But he is not to blame. It is the competitive system that is at fault, and the cure is to abolish competition and establish a co-operative system under which Mr.
Massey and every one of his employees would receive the full results of their toil. Under Socialism the Honorable Samuel Blake could also become an honorable and useful man, and, without being a Dr. Jekyll and Mr.
Hyde, his pleading qualities could be used to good advantage. We can have Socialism as soon as the people vote for it. Your vote and influence will aid the Cause.—G. W. W.

Penniless, Hungry and Cold.

The heading of an article in a New York daily a few days ago was: "Pen-niless, Hungry and Cold, This Family Was Evicted." Here is the shameful story:
"With their furniture piled on the sidewalk in front of the house from which they had been evicted, Edward O'Connell, his wife, Margaret, and their five children, one an infant three weeks old, shivered in the cold last night.
Poorly clad, the destitute family huddled on the sidewalk, while a crowd of people congregating around them extended their sympathy. But the cold blasts of wind howling up the avenue urged the onlookers to hurry to their homes, and the poverty-stricken family were soon left alone. Finally several men, moved by the plight of the homeless family, bought a quantity of the furniture for $10. O'Connell had lost his position in a machine shop a few weeks ago. The little money he had saved was soon spent for food for the children, and for a week there had not been a cent in the house. The rent was due on February 1st, but it was not forthcoming, and the agent evicted the family despite their condition."

Indians would share their blankets and food in a way to shame these bargain-hunting furniture buyers. Let us close our eyes and think. Are we civilized? If the spirit of Christ were in our hearts, would we tolerate a system that allows men to own houses and lands without any limitation and to evict honest men from them? What insane sinners we are!—Citizen and Country.

On the Way to Socialism.

When Hon. John Dryden was in Woodstock last—speaking at the Dairymen's Convention—he said that, while many were in favor of Government ownership of certain things, such as railroads, telegraph systems, telephone, etc., he would go further and say that we should own our ocean steamers, so that we could carry our own freight at our own convenience, in vessels specially fitted for the purpose. There is little or no difficulty in anyone who can relieve himself of his distinctive prejudices seeing what great advantages must accrue to the public in their owning and controlling all things controllable for the whole public instead of having to submit to the wills of corporations; which, under such a name, are only small parts of ourselves. The fact that Hon. Mr.
Dryden has committed himself to the principle of "public ownership" makes a situation in Ontario which may well cause us to ask: "Whither are we drifting?" Public ownership and control of anything is Socialistic effort, no matter by what other name it is called.
The referendum is purely Socialistic, and is the very triumph of democracy.
It makes it none the less so because Mr.
Ross sees in it the only way out of a very awkward dilemma, and because it is prompted by a Government not entirely committed to Socialism. The present situation in Ontario serves to show that Socialism is inevitable, and is the only way out of the many difficulties which confront society to-day as the result of ignoring the great laws of cooperation by which alone society can be held—and is held—together.—Woodstock Standard.

They Claim to be Christians.

"With bare feet, bleeding from contact with the crust of sleet on the snow, or protected only by rags or pieces of carpet, twenty poor children, thinly clad and shivering and crying in their misery, stood for nearly four hours on Thursday morning in the street in front of the school board office, on Main street, between Ninth and Court."— Cincinnati Post.
"As ye have done it unto the least of these so ye have done it unto me." There is a picture of your alleged civilization. Nice, isn't it? Proud of it, no doubt! Glorious, free country!
Prosperity rampant! The well-fed, well-liveried stewards of the children feasting in fine offices, with their hands deep into the public treasury, and twenty little innocents standing barefoot in the cold sleet and snow waiting the pleasure of the monsters! And they claim to be Christians! They believe in private ownership that produces just such conditions. They believe public trust is a private swap. If there were only a real hell with fire and brimstone for such! But then they are the eminently respectable class! The conservative class! Working people, why will you vote the same principles as such men when you see the babies, the tender little ones, treated worse than beasts —little ones of the working people only?
Ye gods! have you minds that you see not the cheat the rich teach you?—Appeal to Reason.

Cheaper Than Monkeys.

A joke is being printed in the papers about monkeys being taught to pick cotton. But there is no need of monkeys. There are white people, as well as black, who are cheaper than monkeys.
They will pick cotton for less than anyone can live decently on. Like workers in other vocations, they are the monkeys that gather millions of wealth for their masters, and are satisfied with poorer treatment in return than the rich give their dogs.—Id.
