THE KING'S $10,000 COOK.

A FRENCHMAN AND OF COURSE AN ARTIST.

"A Perfect Treasure," the King Calls Him-The Kitchen of a Palace.

taster.

draws an annual salary of $10,000 ber of the household tastes it and a year-about the same as a Lieutenant-General in the British Army or an Admiral of the Flast. It is the same as the official income of two members of Lord Salisbury's Cabinet and it exceeds that of the Keeper of the British Museum and of sundry Bishops.

Mr. Menager's position is much firmer than the Ministry's. The King has referred to him again and again as a "perfect treasure," and frequently proffers him a cigar from thing. Then he puts his money on "Twenty years later, the forgeries er's career goes to substantiate the saying that great cooks are born, not made. He is not more than 40 now, and the compliment of being asked to become chef to the Prince of Wales was paid him more than five years ago. He is a Frenchman, probably of the south, tall and comely with a black beard trimmed on

MODEL OF HIS MASTER'S.

It was from the kitchen of the Reform Club, the best club for dining in London, that he moved westward a few hundred yards to Marlborough house. The Reform Club kitchen has been for long the studio of great artists. Its Tory neighbor, the Carleplodded along with the old plain dishes and let the cookery contest go by default, only shaking its produces his bunch of keys and dehead and muttering, "Those Whigs always had French leanings."

Before the Prince of Wales's friends started the Marlborough Club at his own door he dined often with the Marquis of Hartington, now the Duke of Devonshire, and Sir Henry James at the Reform Club. -There he learned for the first time to admire the man who devised his dinners. When Mr. Menager was asked to come up higher he took his methods with him. For one thing he will have all the simpler. work done by kitchen maids. No male hands in the junior kitchen for him. He says with conviction that he does not believe that feminine nature can rise to the greatest heights in his art any more than in painting, poetry or music. Yet, in his rare moments of comparative humility he will half admit that his women assistants contrive great works for which he, as chef, gets credit, and he knows other renowned kitchens in London, Sir Edward Lawson's and Julius Wernher's, which have frequently served dinners to his royal master and are controlled absolutely by women Payne and Mr. Menager, although the last of the forgeries found its ing been deprived of his sight a good fines himself to pastry, omelettes and rolls. Other matters he intrusts to feminine hands. He does not sleep under the King's roof, but has his private residence in a street not very far away. Breakfasts are not his affairs on ordinary days; they are the task of his assistant. It is not looked for that any artist can produce three masterpieces in one day, especially when the greatest, the dinner, has to come last. Thus, Mr. Menager need not quit his own roof tree till after 11 o'clock. Then he residents are returning every week, steps into a handsome and drives to everybody is too busy to think about Marlborough House. His kitchen is big and bright and has all the win- six months from the present time dows on the ground floor facing the

brought to him and HIS WORK BEGINS.

of dishes for his own meals. That realized 6,000 stamps will be is done by Lord Farquhar, the Mas- work before the end of the year and ter of the Household, or Lord Valen- if they turn out gold as fast as betia, the Comptroller; but of course fore the war they will be producing it is always varied enough to in- at the rate of $80,000,000 a year. clude anything the King wants, for The people in the Rand, however, functionaries to know his tastes.

Mr. Menager selects everything that dustry. They say there is not he needs. The master of the kitchen particle of doubt from what is for a moment. Closer examination Mr. Blackwood, a much more pro- known of the mineral resources and saic personage, a mere man of fig- the present plans for development had shown the possibility of splitures, sees that all the articles come that within five years there will be in and that the items on the trades- 17,000 stamps in operation. This impossibility of passing the second men's accounts correspond. When he would be nearly three times as many has verified them they are taken to stamps as have ever been worked on faint to pass. Sir Nigel Kingscote, the Paymaster, the Rand. who writes out checks for payment. Leaving these persons to their count- may be extravagant, but it shows ing-house work, Mr. Menager sallies at least the confidence of the people most fabulous sum, and the Bank of forth from Marlborough House smok- in the future of the Rand whose fal- England would no doubt have ing a big cigar and walks up St. len fortunes they are now working bought it from him. But there was James's street. His destination is with the utmost energy to restore. the Chef's Club in Shaftesbury avenue, where he will play a game of billiards. Then he will drop in at the Cafe Royal and afterward have a friendly chat with one or other of his restaurateur compatriots near 12th Hussar Regiment. Starting at of the note, leaving the ends loose. Piccadilly Circus. At six o'clock he three in the morning, they rode se- When the glue was dry the pieces of returns to Marlborough House to venty-two miles in thirteen hours, calico were pulled gently apart, with prepare the King's dinner. He is dismounted, walked a distance of the result that the adhesion of the frankly proud of his early creations twenty-four miles, dined, and then paper to the cloth being greater than and will often include cutlets a la walked back the twenty-four miles, the adhesion of the paper itself, the Reform or other dishes named after and rode again the seventy-two miles two sides of the note adhered to the the great Whig resort in the King's on the return journey, arriving at cloth. On being damped the paper tate to thrust the word "reform" under the eyes of a King when he was dining, but Mr. Menager and his master understand each other.

His is a far harder task than was his pensioned predecessor's in Queen Victoria's days. For weeks at a time, the Queen's meals in the last reign would all be served on a single tray in a corner of one of her private apartments with only one of her All the world and his wife are free daughters and two ladies-in-waiting to look upon King Edwardls coron- for company. But now King Edation pageant in June. The public ward, when he is at Windsor, orders performers, however, will not be the the banqueting table to be set every whole show. Inside the palace gates night. The main table seats about distinguished artists will have to thirty, and for that company Mr. make the effort of their lives. Their Menager must be prepared. Everynames will not appear on the pro- thing is carved in the kitchen and gramme, and for that reason their built up again on serving dishes. The achievements may pass unrecognized King insists that the food shall all unless mentioned now. Among them be served like entrees, the separate are the King's cook and his wine portions ready cut for each diner. Only at Christmas time, when the It was a decree promulgated by baron of beef and the boar's head King Edward when he ascended the are on the list, is any carving done throne that Mr. Menager was not to on the great sideboard. Before the be interfered with. Mr. Menager King touches a dish a senior mem-

PUTS IT BEFORE HIM. No waiter touches the plate after this tasting performance. But these things are outside Mr. Menaget's province. By that time England for forgeries of bank notes, he is mixing in the outer world among his friends. He knows nothing about politics, but he is always ty years ago the Bank was the vicvery glad to know a good thing tim of a more amazing crime than about horses. It is his great re- the famous Bidwell forgeries, one of laxation le sport and his master the chief cashiers defrauding it of sometimes lets him know a good £320,000. with a will.

Tradesmen holding the royal warrant furnish all the meat and house- Mr. Fauntleroy of Berners street, hold supplies. They are understood to complain that though the volume of business is much bigger in the new reign th (!oyal purse-strings are more tightly held.

The King's wine-taster, Mr. Payne, is scarcely so close to the throne as Mr. Menager, the cook. Mr. Menager rose to his present height through sheer genius, while Mr. Payne belongs to the hereditary branch of the British Constitution, for he succeeded his father.

Physically, he is a great man, and he treats his office with becoming gravity. Twice a week-it will be oftener when coronation time comes -he walks into St. James's palace, scends through a trapdoor into the cellar accompanied by a servitor holding a lantern.

The cellar is a subterranean passage extending to Buckingham palace, passing under the Mall, the traffic of London going unheard above. Locked side doors show where particular bins lie and the thousands of bottles stacked along the walls are scarcely distinguishable from the old gray sides of the passage. What is now a long, narrow wine cellar, stretching from palace to palace had romantic and other uses in the days of the Stuarts, and even, they say, much later.

is to take out. Each kind he tastes. Like the professional at his craft, he the greatest bank drama of our its place. does not swallow. He will tell you time. It was one of those great that a man who swallows cannot crimes which are revealed by a slip goes fishing, unaccompanied. taste. He just takes a little in his at the eleventh hour-at the fifty- fishes with hooks which he baits and mouth and puts it out.

So many dozen are taken up in a table when it is used. Then Mr. One of the last bills left pleased the when his dog trees a "cotton-tail, Payne returns to his cellar for more. forgers so much that it was decided preference, scored one rather notable the only bill among hundreds, which while at work in the mines. victory over the kitchen. The King the forgers had never takes coffee for breakfast-always champagne, a small bottle.

Mining Resuming.

A letter received from Johannesburg says that a large number of war, and all are sanguine that in the mining industry will be on as The carte for luncheon is large a scale as it was when the mines were closed over two years ago. The town was never so busy as it is to-day.

The King never draws up the list If these sanguine expectations are

it is a chief qualification of these feel perfectly certain that there is to be an enormous increase in the in- for a moment the scare seemed to

REMARKABLE FEAT.

From Paris is reported a remarkable feat by five lieutenants of the to glue a piece of calico on each side meny. Timprous cooks might hesi- three o'cleck the next afternoon. and the calico were again separated,

SOME RECENT BANK OF ENG-LAND FORGERIES.

The Penalty Formerly Was Death -Some Big Frauds-Note Splitting.

A writer in the St. James's Gazette, referring to the recent arrests in connection with the forgery of five-pound Bank of England notes,

"The Bank of England is examining its five-pound notes with a closer eye than ever just now, and those on to-day stands for a golden harvest whom the responsibility of identifiwith the notes of a hundred years common cardboard, or something to ago. Bank notes were not always so difficult to forge as they are to-day. "The first forger must have found his work tolerably easy. But he paid for it with his life. It was a century and a half ago, and in those days the man who forged a bank gote, like the man who stole a sheep, paid for his crime on the gallows. "Every fortnight in 1818-on an average-there was an execution in and in 1820 more than a hundred forgers were convicted. Nearly nine-of a banker resulted in an even greater loss. The forging banker was and his crimes seem to have begun with his forging powers of attorney to keep up the credit of his bank. In that way he was able to sell from the funds large sums of money belonging to other people, and thus for years he

FLOURISHED AND GREW RICH.

out, and at the banking house was the shop, where "Gus" feels them found a confession written eight over, and quickly discovers what is years before, with a postscript which wrong and what is wanting, then said: 'The bank began first to dis- proceeds to make the repairs. count our acceptances and to de- Should it be an unusual break, for stroy the credit of our house; the which he does not have the necessary bank shall smart for it.' Smart for tools, the work is laid aside until it the Bank did; the forgeries ran he provides with his own hands and into £320,000.

"The sum at stake was greater, Two years ago the superintendent ablaze thirty years ago. Everybody summon other paupers to his and succeeded.

ary fortune, the introduction to the attic," and he did. Having prepared bank by an admiring and expectant the pickets, which were all cut true city tailor, the clever manipulating to his model, he proceeded to run the of the £3,000 which deceived the lines, which he did as accurately as Mr. Payne has the list of wine he forging of half the great names of He then planted the posts, put on the city, are all familiar incidents in the railing and drove every picket to ninth minute of the eleventh hour.

There are no rivalries between Mr. not to burn it, and in a few days

FORGOTTEN TO DATE.

"Such a crime as this could hardly have created a greater scare in Threadneedle street, however, than the announcement a few years ago Hotels Are Crowded and Gold that somebody had succeeded in accomplishing a very simple scientific feat. It became known that a banknote had been split in two, and the authorities were aghast lest the world should be flooded with duplicate notes.

> "The splitting of the note had undoubtedly been accomplished quite honestly and without any evil intent, and the man who split it was frank enough to let the Bank know that he had done so. A long correspondence passed between the Bank and the man with the secret and at last a test was decided upon, a Bank of England note being sent to the inventor for experimenting upon. The Bank received it back in two pieces, the one a facsimile of the other!

"The authorities were puzzled, and have become more real. But only brought back confidence. The test ting the note, but it proved, too, the half, the printing on which was too

"Had the mysterious inventor been This estimate of future growth able to overcome this difficulty his secret would have been worth an alno way of splitting a note and retaining the clearness of the impression throughout, and

HERE THE INVENTOR FAILED. It transpired that his method was

and there were two bank notes where only one had been before.

be accused of running any unnecessary risk, and such incidents as the splitting of the notes, and the forgeries, have made the authorities more than ever careful. It is strange to think of a bonfire of banknotes in the heart of London, but such a sight was regularly witnessed until a few years ago, when the Bank of England destroyed all returned notes by fire.

"Now they disappear in another way. Placed in long cylinders, the notes, when their life is over, are converted into pulp by acids. What is to-morrow a heap of waste, and cation rests will be thankful, no the magic little bit of paper, its life doubt, that they have not to deal of glory over, becomes a piece of strengthen the backs of ledgers."

REPAIRS BY A BLIND MAN. Farming Implements and Watches in Order.

There is in the Clay county, Ind., infirmary as a pauper, a blind man, now. who is as much of a prodigy as of the mathematical lightning cal- stein, the home of the Empress. The culator freaks who have from time cadet school is there, where the to time been exhibited over the cadets are prepared for the more adcountry. "Gus," as he is called by vanced classes of the upper cadet his fellow-inmates and the keepers of academy of Gross-Lichterfelde. The the institution, is a rare mechanical royal pupils have a residence in the genius and manifests as much ambi- loyal park. Near it is a large lake, tion to excel in his work as though and on a peninsula of twenty-eight all the avenues of competitive in- acres is a leased farm, where, with dustry were open to his hand and six companions, they seriously application. He maintains a general repair shop on the premises, which he built himself, which is provided with a variety of tools and ap- and it has not been altered in the pliances, all of which are kept in ex- slightest degree. A great chuestnut cellent order and every piece in its proper place.

When any of the farming implements on the place become impaired, peasant's room, with a woven mat, garden tools or domestic utilities, a red-painted table, and a closet including watches and clocks, brok- that contains heavy earthenware "Then the banker's sin found him en or out of order, they are taken to plates and coarse dishes. . skill the appliances required.

but the Fauntleroy forgeries were of the institution desired to put a prosaic and uninteresting compared new picket fence around the large with the way in which the Bidwell front yard, and "Gus" was given brothers set the financial world charge of the job, with authority to knows how the plot to rob the bank, sistance. But when he proposed to hatched in the throne-room of a roy- run the lines and locate the different al castle as the brothers passed sections of the fence, "Gus" told the through to see its glories, developed superintendent that he would do that himself; that he was ambitious "The rich American and his imagin- to do the whole job from "cellar to Bank authorities, and, at length, the would a man with two good eyes.

"Gus" also hunts rabbits and from which he disengages the "fin-"The Bidwells and the accomplice nies," just as any other expert crate and handed to Sir Nigel Kings- sat in a little room sharing up the Izaak Walton might do. But when cote, Paymaster of the Household, stolen fortune -£100,000-and tear- he hunts rabbits he takes with him who issues the wine to the King's ing up the evidences of their guilt. (not a gun) a dog and an ax, and "Gus" is sure of his meat.

"Gus" was not always blind, havthe wine cellar has, by the King's way to the bank. It was the one bill many years ago by an explosion

> BREAD MADE WHILE YOU WAIT. A self-moving flour mill and bakery to follow regiments on a march, and to make fresh bread every hour with flour ground from wheat obtained by requisition upon the spot, has recently been designed on the Continent. This vehicle is formed of two parts, after the manner of artillery carriages. The first comprises the motor as well as a battery of mills with their bolters, and alongside of them cession has to be careful what he the mechanical kneading troughs. All says and how he says it if he would this apparatus is actuated by the have the greatest lead over his commotor that is employed to propel the petitors, or if he wants to feel sur ed in the rear.

A COURSE OF SPROUTS.

"The Bank of England can hardly Education and Discipline of the German Princes.

A correspondent of an English paper writing of a meeting with the German crown prince, describes him as a rather good-looking young man with the fresh, high color and the ready blush of a country boy. He was surprised to find him exceedingly simple and retiring, in spite of the rumor that he inherited his father's appreciation of the might of the Hohenzollerns. The prince is a young man of fine physique, the fruit of having had little pampering from his youth until now.

His father even improved on the simple military education and discipline under which all the Hohenzollern princes have been brought up. It is only a few years ago that the crown prince could have been seen trudging behind a plough, or milking, or cleaning out the hencoop on the farm that has been established for the young princes. His brothers, August William and Oscar, are going through the same course

The farm where Prince Frederick 'Blind Tom,' the musician, or any William was trained is Plon, in Holundertake agricultural labor.

The farmhouse on the place is typical old-fashioned peasant's abode tree shades the entrance, which leads directly into a primitive, whitewash ed room, furnished exactly like any Adjoining this room is a small kitchen where the princes often do their own cooking, for they have no servants. While living there they must do everything for themselves. The produce of the farm is sent to the imperial household in Berlin or Potsdam, and the Emperor examines it both in respect to quality and quantity.

The season's crop last year was sent to Berlin. It had been planted, weeded, grubbed out and barreled by the two princes and their companions, with no aid from adults. and the yield was excellent. The Emperor pays his sons the market price for their produce, and in addition to raising the crops, they must keep exact accounts, showing just how their farming operations stand, and what are the profits each

The princes had a bad time with their vegetables last year, for the drought killed nearly everything. But the orchard did well, and they balanced their loss in vegetables by unusual success with chickens. Prince August William invested in prize white American Wyandottes. they proved to be phenomenal layers. Besides the chickens, there is a colony of white Pekin ducks that have a beautiful little house built for them near the pond.

A REMARKABLE COW.

A British journal announces the death of one of the most remarkable cows that ever figured in public milk tests. This was a short-horn Guernsey cross-bred animal. She was in her ninth year at the time of her death. Some idea of her great ability as a milker may be gathered from the fact that during the 101 months prior to her death she had produced at the rate of over 1,500 gallons of milk per annum. On the day before her death she gave 66 pounds of milk.

The first man in the business provehicle. A continuous oven is haul- that he is safe from the interference of others in claiming the lead.

FIND THE CALF THAT JOHN IS TRYING TO CATCH.