How It Comes and How It Goes.

(New York Journal.)

Mr. Reginald Vanderbilt, son of the railroad family, played roulette one night at Mr. Canfield's gambling house in Forty-fourth street, in the city of New York, and lost $125,000. He rose with a smile of good natured indifference. Thus briefly the news report tells one incident of life in a great city, where the very rich and the very poor dwell together in harmony.

A man with six children and a wife gets up at daybreak—his wife has been up before him to prepare some thin coffee and fat bacon.

He takes his heavy crowbar and starts out for a distant point on the New York Central Railroad track, where he has been ordered to work.
With the heavy crowbar and other tools he works all day long, tamping down the stone ballast under the ties. He goes home at dark, having earned one hundred and twenty-five cents—a dollar and a quarter.

Mr. Reginald Vanderbilt, whose family is made prosperous by the labor of tens of thousands of men, arises at 10 or 11 o'clock, walks on Fifth Avenue, lunches at Delmonico's, rides in the park, dines leisurely, goes to the theatre and drifts into Canfield's. He nods to the croupier, who, with his apparatus all ready to swindle, is most affable. A small ivory ball, spun by nervous fig-gers, swings around the hollow wheel.
It strikes, jumps, rattles, settles down, and one play is over. For an hour or two it rattles on. Then Mr. Vanderbilt goes away, having spent the day most satisfactorily. He has lost at gambling $125,000. He never earned a dollar in his life.

The gambling amusement of one evening represents the labor for one day of 100,000 men.

Is Reginald Vanderbilt a bad, vicious boy? Not at all. He simply takes what our stupid social organization gives him—the labor of other men. He tries to get what pleasure he can out of life, and what excitement he can for his nerves. Not young Mr. Vanderbilt is to blame—nor can you justly blame the swindling vampire who owns the gambling house. Both of them are products of actual conditions. Both are even useful. For the little gambling story which leaks out is a splendid lesson. It impresses on men's minds the horrid injustice of turning over the earnings of a hundred thousand men, the railroad wealth of a great state, to a foolish dissipated boy. It impresses even on the dullest mind the gross stupidity of a system which compels the many to work and suffer that the few may be dissipated, ruining themselves while they deprive others.

Society is afflicted with many diseases. This particular ailment can be abolished by public ownership of public franchises. Remember this when you are studying the records of men who ask for your votes.

Unrest in Europe.

The unrest and discontent of the people of Europe are becoming apparent.
Spain is dealing with riots, and a revolution is among the possibilities. The Socialists are giving Germany no small amount of alarm. The racial feeling between Hungary and Austria threatens the existence of that empire. The people of the Balkan states are restive.

Disturbances in Ireland are feared by the British Government. Russia is on the verge of a revolution. If the year closes without serious troubles to one or more of the Governments of Europe; they may consider themselves fortunate.
The truth is, that among the common people of Europe life is scarcely worth living: The burdensome taxes for the maintenance of royalty, of large military and naval establishments, and of other institutions incidental to their social and civic systems, are grinding the people to the earth. The limit of human endurance is nearly reached, and hence the evidence of popular discontent. Perhaps the most threatening of all the situations is in Russia. The czar is a well meaning man, and is credited with a desire to initiate many reforms and to grant a larger measure of freedom to the people; but he is surrounded by an autocracy of nobles that thwarts every effort at change, nor will there be any change in Russia until this autocracy is broken. It may take a revolution to do it, and this will come in time. An unlimited despotism, such as Russia is, cannot last always. The people of the twentieth century have a better idea of personal liberty and civic rights than they had a century or two ago. When the time comes for them to strike, the world may witness a second French revolution in Russia. An old device of autocratic governments to still unrest at home is to start a war abroad. Possibly a war in Eastern Russia might suit the purposes of Russia's government.—Denver Daily News.

Try It.

There is a little article that everybody uses, and yet I never see it advertised. I look over the daily and weekly press in vain to find where it can be purchased. On this they are as silent as the tomb. In vain I look at the signs on the street or in the shop windows for it. It is sold in every village and hamlet in the land, and yet no drummer ever carries samples of it or takes an order for it. Its price never raises, and yet it pays handsomely all who deal in it. And, strange to say, there is usually but one place in a town that keeps it.
There is always a supply of it—never too much nor too little. It is never taxed, no matter how many thousand dollars' worth are in stock. There has never been any corner or speculation in it, and its price at wholesale or retail is always just the same. It has never made a millionaire or a pauper. That little thing is a postage stamp; and if all articles were produced and handled in the same way, there would be neither poverty, crime nor insanity in the United States. Try it.—Wayland.

The Tramp Problem.

The tramp problem is a serious one, and some of our captains of industry have made valuable suggestions toward its solution.

First. The New York Herald says: "The best meal to give to a tramp is a leaden one."

Second. The Chicago Tribune says:
"The simplest plan, probably, when one is not a member of the Humane Society, is to put a little strychnine or arsenic in the meat or other supplies furnished tramps."

Third. Scott, the railroad king, says:
"Give them the rifle diet for a few days, and see how they like that kind of bread."

In New Zealand the government gave employment to all who could not find remunerative work. That solved the problem, and that's what the Socialists will do in America. And, in addition to that, the brutes who would murder unemployed men will be given an opportunity to prove that they have advanced out of savagery before they will be treated like men.—Appeal to Reason.

The distress among the working classes of London is more severe than at any time since 1893.

Starvation is thinning out the overcrowded ranks of the German workers, thanks to trusts managed by private individuals.

A ray of light comes from France.
The Socialists are making an enthusiastic campaign against the combined forces of capitalism. Great gains are expected at the coming elections.
