THE PROVINCIAL ELECTIONS.

At the general Provincial elections yesterday the Government was sustained, the latest returns giving it a majority of 7. Premier Ross and all his colleagues were re-elected, and Hon. J. R. Stratton, the Provincial Secretary, to whom the Conservatives of West Peterborough threatened to do all sorts of things, had nearly or quite his old majority of 900. We are sorry to say that the well-meant attempts to redeem the two Victorias resulted in failures. Mr. Carnegie was re-elected by a majority of, as far as known, 436, which further returns may alter somewhat; and in West Victoria, where Mr. Smale, the Liberal candidate, was considered safe, Mr. Fox had a majority of 110. Mr. Heyd took his defeat like a philosopher, and in his brief speech in his committee room last night he heartily thanked all who had supported him, and said that, although he would not contest East Victoria again, his hearers might rest assured that at the next Dominion election he would, if alive, run up against Sam Hughes for a couple of weeks. We must reserve comments upon the election until our next issue. The returns from the polling-places in this riding, up to the time of going to press, are as follow:

Killed by Lightning.

At about 6.15 on the evening of Thursday of last week, during the terrible storm that raged over a very wide area and did a great deal of damage, two of the children of Mr. Thomas Smith were struck and instantly killed by lightning in front of their home on May street. They were Eliza Jane, aged 12 years, 5 months and 28 days, and James Ernest, aged 8 years, 10 months and 7 days. The little boy was standing on the floor of the verandah, near to but at one side of the open door of the house, and his sister, who was going to a house on Francis street for milk, had descended the two steps that lead from the verandah to the sidewalk, and was nearly opposite to, and not more than seven or eight feet from, her brother. Mr. Smith, who was coming home from work, and was about fifteen feet from the end of the verandah, told her that, as another heavy shower of rain appeared to be coming on, she had better go back for a cloak. The remainder of her life was not long enough for her to reply, or to turn around; for, as she looked up and smiled, there came a terrific flash of lightning, and she and her little brother fell, stone dead, before their horrified father's eyes. The girl, he told us afterwards, appeared to "wilt" and sink in a heap, and then fell forward, with the right side of her face against the edge of the sidewalk, by which it was slightly bruised, but the boy fell over flat onto his back. The news of the tragedy spread like wildfire, and in a very few minutes the house was full of persons anxious to see the children and sympathize with their bereaved parents. When the bodies were prepared for burial, no mark of any kind was found on the boy; but the girl's left boot had been badly torn and its string broken in two or three places, and there was a discoloration on the outside of the foot. At the moment the children were killed the house was struck, and Mrs. Pogue, who was attending her daughter, Mrs. Smith, who was ill in bed in a room on the ground floor, was knocked down by the shock, and suffered a terrible headache for several hours. The lightning entered under the back eave, then, tearing its way through a partition, traversed the whole length of the hall, and made its exit through the front wall just over one of the upstairs windows. The double funeral on Saturday afternoon was very numerous, attended, and about a hundred school children, who marched in two lines, formed part of the procession. As the hearse would only hold one coffin, the smaller was carried by six boys from the house to the cemetery, where the funeral service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Garbutt.

Mr. Smith narrowly escaped sharing the fate of his children. When within a few rods of his home he was spoken to by Mrs. Dr. Gould, who was at her front gate; and, though he did not stop, he slackened his pace while answering her, and the delay of a few seconds thus occasioned probably saved his life.

Last week's Gazette had gone to press about an hour and a half before the sad occurrence.

Teachers' Convention.

The annual convention of the West Victoria Teachers' Association was held in the Fenelon Falls public school on Thursday and Friday of last week. The first session opened with the address of the president, Mr. Birchard, followed by the reading of the minutes of last meeting by Mr. T. Mark, the secretary. Miss Macniven then read a very clever and interesting essay on "Wind," and an excellent paper was read by Miss McQuade on "The Relation between Home and School." The question drawer was then taken up, and a committee appointed to consider and answer the questions. The meeting adjourned until 9 o'clock on Friday morning, when Dr. Sims gave an excellent lecture on "The Care of the Teeth." Miss B. Nie then gave a very interesting object lesson to a class of children on "Wood Charcoal," pointing out its qualities, preparation and uses. Mr. Reazin delivered a very interesting lecture on "Nature Studies," showing how teachers should connect the study of nature with other school subjects. Answers to the question drawer were then considered. The afternoon session opened with a lively discussion on the subject "Is there too much 'Home Work' given to young pupils?" introduced by Mr. Birchard. Rev. Mr. MacNamara delivered an excellent address, and was followed by Rev. Mr. Sinclair, who also spoke in a very able manner. The programme was interspersed with a reading by Miss Jardine, a recitation by Miss Prior and a violin solo by Miss Fanny Brandon. Much regret was felt on account of the unavoidable absence of Mr. Lochead, of Toronto, who was to have addressed the Association. The nominating committee then read their report, and the meeting closed by singing the National Anthem.
