The Coronation.

The coronation of King Edward VII is to take place on the 26th inst., and already old London, the real "hub of the universe"—or, at any rate, of the item known as The Earth—is crowded with royalties and other distinguished personages who are to take part in the pageant, which will, it is predicted, be the most gorgeous ever witnessed in modern times. Among those present will be Sir Wilfrid Laurier, Premier of the Dominion of Canada, and the Hon. George W. Ross, Premier of Ontario, both of whom are now on their way, and the latter of whom may possibly come home "with a handle to his name"; and all the component parts of the recently saved British Empire will be numerously represented. The King has been somewhat unwell from the effects of a slight cold, and in consequence did not attend the Ascot races on Tuesday, but the latest despatch says that he is improving, and it is to be hoped that he will be in perfect health and well able to endure the fatigue of the two days' ceremonies next week. However much the coronation ceremonies may be approved by those who still believe in the divine right of kings and by the pageant-loving masses, they are unsparingly condemned by the Executive Committee of the Scottish Home Rule Association, who have sent to the Archbishop of Canterbury an expostulatory letter, in which they call the ceremony "barbaric" and "an insult to the intelligence of the age that will make thoughtful people hang their heads with conscious pity." What they particularly object to is the anointing of the King with holy oil and the words to be used that will imply that he reigns by divine sanction, "which," they say, "is as false as it is pernicious, for the King is called to the throne by the Parliament of Great Britain, whose gift it is, and who have the authority to bestow and to take away." That is quite true, and if, in time to come, the Parliament (that is, the people) of Great Britain shall see fit to substitute a republican form of government for a monarchical, the fact that the King then reigning has been anointed with holy oil will not prevent them from so doing.

Suicide of J. W. Howry.

On Wednesday of last week we heard a report that J. W. Howry, head of the firm that formerly did business in the Falls, had poisoned himself somewhere in the States; but, up to the time the Gazette went to press on Thursday afternoon, we saw no record of it in print, and it was too serious a matter to publish on the strength of a rumor. But it was quite true. Mr. Howry took a dose of morphine, with suicidal intent, in his room in a lodging house in Kansas City, Mo., on the morning of the 9th inst., and left a note stating that he had taken his life in consequence of business troubles with his son, J. H. Howry, and requesting his friends to "keep everything from the papers," which they apparently succeeded in doing for two or three days. The deceased, who was about seventy years of age, made money out of dry goods in East Saginaw, Michigan, and then went into the lumbering business, at which he was so successful that he is said to have been worth at one time nearly a million dollars. Of course he wanted more, and he and his two sons came to the Falls in 1894, acquired the Smith sawmill and timber limits, and for a time were regarded with awe, as the possessors of great wealth, and admiration, as energetic business men. But it soon began to be rumored that they didn't know anything about running drives of logs or cutting lumber, that their methods were extravagant and wasteful, and that their career would be but short. In the fall of 1896 the end came; the business fell into the hands of the Bank of Toronto, and the Howrys went back to the States. Previous to this about $200,000 worth of lumber was burned in the yard, and a couple of months later the mill also went up in smoke, but both fires were believed to be quite accidental. And now the poor old man has been driven to suicide by business worries, from which cause, it is said, an average of 15,000 persons take their own lives annually in the principal cities of the United States. The number that commit self-murder over the civilized world in a single year, because they find life unendurable under existing conditions, must be great enough, if known, to stagger humanity, and the number will increase steadily unless the conditions be changed. There is no hope but in Socialism—in other words, public ownership of the means of production and distribution—under which all will have enough of everything, as the strong will be unable to prey upon the weak, and no one will find life a burden from lack of means to preserve it in comfort.

Baptist Association Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Whitby and Lindsay branch of the Baptist Association was held at Fenelon Falls, for the first time in about sixteen years, and it is needless to say that every Baptist in the village accommodated as many visitors as he or she had room for. The meetings opened on Tuesday evening, and the chair was occupied by Rev. J. P. McFarlane, B. A. of Port Perry, Moderator of the Association, by whom the annual sermon was preached. Rev. J. G. Brown, B. A. of Toronto, Secretary of Foreign Missions, followed with an interesting address on mission work, at which he spent several years in India. Wednesday morning was devoted to business, and a discussion on "Christian Beneficence," led by Mr. H. L. Kempton, of Sunderland; Mr. H. Graham, of Kinmount, and Mr. W. T. Roberts, of Oshawa. On Wednesday afternoon a Women's session was held. Miss Jessie Dryden, B. A., of Moulton College, Toronto, presided; and gave an interesting address on women's work. Rev. J. G. Brown spoke on "The Women of India." Miss Annie Trotter, of Toronto, followed with an address on "Home Mission Work." Mrs. Mrs. J. P. Riley and Miss Jessie Dryden were re-elected to the offices of Director and President of the Women's Circles of this Association. Miss Silver, of Lindsay, sang a solo which was well received. Two addresses were given in the evening. Rev. J. B. Kennedy, B. A., of Toronto, gave a lively address on Home Mission work, touching on missions in Manitoba and the North-west. Dr. Farmer, of McMaster University, followed with an address on "Education." Members of the choir and the Misses Anderson of Uxbridge and Mrs. Stoddard of Victoria Harbor, gave selections of music. The proceedings of Thursday's meeting will appear next week.
