

THE GERMAN IRIS.

Good Words for This Plant With Some Growing Instructions.

The German iris has individuality and classical shape, and while sufficiently vigorous is not so robust and pushing as to become hopelessly common, flaunting in color and vulgar in size—charges which indiscriminating people sometimes prefer against the Japanese irises. The German species will not thrive like the Japanese in low, wet places where water stands in winter. They cannot endure such heavy mulches of fertilizer and must not be planted so deeply. Set the rhizomes just level with the surface, for if planted deeper they decay. They do not form many fibrous roots, so transplanting in cold climates must be done in spring or in August.

The German iris grows very fast and is very free flowering, beginning to bloom about the time the tulip fades, and usually lasting through June. The flower stems vary considerably in height, some being quite short, thus bearing their flowers close together. Some are tall and others intermediate. This feature can be adapted in planting a bed or border of the different sorts. Set the tall sorts at the back, grading the varieties down to the dwarfs in front thus securing a sloping bank of bloom. All sorts of iris love to grow by the waterside. The beds will grow crowded in time and unless thinned the flowers will grow paler in color and smaller in size. The flowers of the German iris, such as illustrated, have a great variety of colors.

Good Seed for the Farm.

One of the most important things to consider in the production of satisfactory crops on the farm is the obtaining of suitable seeds and of the best varieties for the purpose, says a writer in The American Cultivator.

If all other things are properly attended to and this neglected, inferior results may be expected. First, seeds should be adapted to the locality, climate and soil. All kinds of crops will not flourish alike under all conditions or in all parts of the United States. It is always safest to grow those kinds that are adapted to any particular location, as they will usually give the best results.

It will do to obtain seeds from a more northern or colder climate, but it is hardly safe to take them north from the south, as they will not be so likely to mature a crop owing to a difference in season and climate.

Seeds in any locality may be greatly improved by careful selection and propagation. Particularly is this the case with corn. A good variety can be well kept up in its original characteristics and even improved in some respects, as earliness, uniformity, productiveness, etc., by this careful attention to selection from year to year. Valuable varieties are often obtained in this way, entitling them to the designation of pedigree or thoroughbred.

Time on the Farm.

A farmer's success depends to a large extent upon economy of time. One who loses all the time when it is too wet to use the plow or hoe is too heavily handicapped to ever succeed, for he has lost more than 100 days in the year, or nearly one-third of his time, for he not only loses the rainy days, but all the days following until the soil is in workable condition. Instead of this he should lay up work "for a rainy day," so that when he can't work in the field he can work in the shop or elsewhere. There is never a time, or should not be, when there is no work to be done that may be done under cover. Every farm should have a shop for work in wood, iron and leather, and tools for each. If there is no indoor work urgent, invent new work. Conveniences previously well done may be better and more convenient. Many farmers idle away bad weather, when if they had plenty of money they would keep some person handy with tools busy all the while at work which he could do himself entirely without loss of time from out of door farmwork, —Farm and Ranch.

One Thing and Another.

More attention should be given to the quality of production in pork than in all other kinds of meat. Good blood in the herd and a proper food supply means satisfaction in hog raising.

If results obtained at the Geneva (N.Y.) station are an index to the behavior of sugar beets in general, it is thought that there need be no fear of injury to their quality by the use of a moderate or even liberal quantity of manure either in fall or spring.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. A postmaster is required to give notice by letter (returning the paper does not answer the law), when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office and state the reasons for its not being taken. Any neglect to do so makes the postmaster responsible to the publisher for payment.
2. If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether it is taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until the payment is made.
3. Any person who takes a paper from the post-office, whether directed to his name or another, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay.
4. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post-office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.
5. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.
