SCHOOL SHOES FOR SCHOOL DAYS.

School time again pretty soon.

We have gathered for the boys and girls a lot of suitable shoes—big shoes—little shoes—all sorts—all prices.

When we bought them we had in mind the busy feet of the romping boy, and his mother's care for neatness.

We looked well to the features that must stand the strain of many a kick; and, after we had made sure of looks and strength, we found that the price could be kept within easy reach.

FOR INSTANCE----

Dressy, strong shoes for $1.00.

Better ones for more money.

Parentage Discouraged.

Dr. Andrews, one of Rockefeller's chattel professors in Rockefeller College, Chicago, in a recent lecture said that "Parentage among the poor and improvident ought to be discouraged," and insists that the duty of populating the earth should devolve upon the rich and cultivated! The next thing, the rich will organize a trust under the laws of New Jersey for producing and distributing babies! They will then drive all the little producers out of the market, because they can produce so much cheaper! The only difficulty in the way is, that the rich are so debilitated by excesses that, so far, in all nations, they have not been able to keep up the stock, and their lines have been filled by the energy and mental power that alone can be produced by men and women living normal lives, and working more or less in the open air with their hands. Look at the families of the rich, and imagine a nation of such! What would a nation of rich, and no workers, be? A nation of workers, with no millionaires, would make a great and strong government. But reverse it! The immaculate gail of drones saying that those who support every nation—without whom there would be no nation, no civilization, no anything—should not reproduce their kind! Dr. Andrews is greater than God. God ordered the people to multiply and replenish the earth. Andrews denies the right or good of it! But then anything may be expected from the freaks who serve the millionaires as teachers in colleges endowed with the fleecings of the people on the oil they use—oil that nature furnished free to the human family, but which has been appropriated by a set of enemies to the human race. But such breaks do good in opening the eyes of the millions.—Appeal to Reason.

The Purport of War.

What (speaking in quite unofficial language) is the net purport and upshot of war? To my own knowledge, for example, there dwell and toil in the British village of Dumdrudge, usually, some five hundred souls. From these—by certain "natural enemies" of the French—there are successively elected, during the French war, say thirty able-bodied men. Dumdrudge has, at her own expense, suckled and nursed them. She has, not without difficulty and sorrow, fed them up to manhood, and even trained them to crafts, so that one can weave, another build, another hammer, and the weakest can stand under thirty stone avoirdupois. Nevertheless, amid much weeping and swearing, they are selected, all dressed in red, and shipped away, at the public charges, two thousand miles, or say only to the south of Spain, and there fed till wanted. And now to that same spot in the south of Spain are thirty similar French artisans, from a French Dumdrudge, in like manner wending; till at length after infinite effort the two parties come into actual juxtaposition, and thirty stand fronting thirty, each with a gun in his hand. Straightway the word "fire" is given, and they blow the souls out of one another; and in place of sixty brisk, useful craftsmen, the world has sixty dead carcasses which it must bury, and anon shed tears for. Had these men any quarrel? Busy as the devil is, not the smallest. They lived far enough apart—wore the most entire strangers. Nay, even in so wide a universe, there was even unconsciously, by commerce, some mutual helpfulness between them. How then? Simpleton, their governors had fallen out, and, instead of shooting each other, they had the cunning to make these poor blockheads shoot.—Carlyle's Sartor Resartus.

Compare These Two Statements.

It is said "comparisons are odious," and perhaps they are, but they may be instructive. Note the following:

Adam entered upon earthly existence about 6,000 years ago; we will call it even 6,000 for the purpose of comparison. We will suppose him still living, and as having been engaged in productive labor for 300 days in each year, and that he saved $100 for each day of work. Three hundred days of labor for each year of the 6,000 years gives one million, eight hundred thousand days, which, multiplied by 100, the number of dollars saved each day, gives one hundred and eighty million dollars as total savings at $100 per day for 6,000 years.

John D. Rockefeller, the Standard Oil magnate, is credited with having "saved" two hundred million dollars in the last forty years. Working men, remember the universally accepted truth, that labor is the only means by which wealth can be created; also the truism that, "to the toiler belongs the product of his toil," and you may find in the foregoing food for profitable thought.

F. L. WEST.

Fifty Thousand Die of Famine.

After a special investigation among the agricultural laborers in Eastern Galicia, the Neue Freie Presse draws a gloomy picture of the miserable conditions which led to the existing strike. The average mortality from famine for several years past, according to the Neue Freie Presse, aggregated 50,000. Laborers' wages range from eight to sixteen cents a day, and women earn from four to eight cents a day. The peasants rarely taste bread, and exist chiefly on a soup, the principal ingredients of which are water and herbs.

When you read such items in the daily press, they make about a much impression on you as water on a duck's back. What do you care for what is occurring in Galicia or any other part of the earth? Such items teach the thoughtless nothing. But the thinker knows why. There has been plenty raised in that country during the past ages for all the people, even with their crude implements of industry. The famine is not caused by drouth, but it exists because the land is owned by a few, and they take from the workers and squander it in riotous living, while those who produce it are left to starve. That is the cause of all alleged famines. The rich class in Galicia are just like the rich in this country; they get their wealth in the same way; treat the workers the same way; are upheld by the working men in the same way; live in no greater splendor, and commit no greater crimes. The working mules of Galicia are funny bipeds—so different from the American species.—Exchange.

It is Queer.

A congregation of half-starved miners will sit for hours listening to the harangue of a well-fed priest on abstinence, frugality and contentment. It will never occur to them to draw comparisons between their own condition and that of the man who talks to them. They will never observe that it is easy for the priest to reflect on the excellence of fasting with his belly full of good food. The wonder is that the miners, with their bowels pinched by hunger, will rather think of eternal bliss than of satisfying their most pressing material wants. It is indeed queer that the thought never comes to them that there is a deep and vital connection between their fasting and the wealth of the corporations.—Ernest Unterman.

At Globe, Arizona, the "too" old parties have combined against the Socialists, which shows, when there is a live issue at stake, there is no difference between republicans and democrats.

The world calls Carnegie a philanthropist because he expends his annual income of $12,000,000 in furnishing libraries for the people. Every book in a public library donated by the Homestead murderer represents the stolen profits of labor, and every building is a colossal monument to our unjust social system.
