An Alarming Situation.

The chief topic of discussion in Canada and across the lakes is the state of affairs in Pennsylvania, which has become so serious as to be absolutely alarming, as 10,000 National Guardsmen have been ordered out to protect the unemployed men who, driven by stern necessity, are willing to take the places of the striking miners. Until cold weather set in, the general public took but little interest in the strike, thinking, probably, that it would soon come to an end; but now, with the very poor actually perishing and all but the rich suffering in consequence of the appalling advance in the price of fuel, indignation at those who are responsible for the strike is being generally and loudly expressed, and governmental interference is beginning to be asked for. The responsible parties are the "operators," as they are called; that is, the men who have leased the mines from the owners, and who—determined to show that they are masters of the situation—will not agree to arbitration, but arrogantly and arbitrarily insist that the 147,500 men and boys who are on strike shall surrender unconditionally, and go back to work at the semi-starvation wages that drove them to desperation. But more than five months have elapsed since they struck, and, with the liberal help extended to them, they may be able to hold out a good while longer, in which event the sufferings of the poor will be frightful. The only solution of the difficulty seems to be the one suggested by the Rev. Frederick George Scott, of St. Matthew's Rectory, Quebec, who, in a letter to the Toronto Globe, says:

"Can such a thing be allowed to continue month after month in a Christian country? And all over this part of North America our people are to suffer, our sick to die, for lack of one of the necessities of life, because the monopolists must have their way. It is time that the great suffering public rose up and trampled in the dust with its many million feet all the clauses in the constitution of civilized countries which enable the rich few to withhold the fuel and food without which the muscles of labor must weaken and relax. The life of a miner is one of darkness, often moral as well as physical. 'Let there be light.' For my part, rather than see the men defeated, I would go around and collect for them, and, I believe, all my confreres throughout the country would do the same. Thousands of lives will be broken this winter all over this region of America in the war between capital and labor. It is time that the Governments which have to protect the property of monopolists with troops had some say in the conduct of the business of such monopolists, especially when they deal with those riches in the storehouse of nature on which man depends for existence."

We are pleased to be able to mention, in this connection, that the coal consumers in Fenelon Falls have had to pay only $7 75 per ton. Mr. Thomas Robson, from whom they purchased it, laid in a large supply before the strike, of which he did not attempt to take advantage, refusing (in this age of greed) to sell to outsiders at far higher prices than he charged residents of the village. The majority of men will call him a fool: we call him a Christian. The people of Drumtochty would say of him, "he's far ban."

A Woman's Bravery.

The following is from the Adrian, Lewance, Michigan, Daily Times of September 27th, and the heroine of the story is the youngest sister of our townsman, Mr. J. J. Nevison:

"W. J. LaFraugh's bakery, No. 36 North Main street, between 6 and 7 o'clock Tuesday night, was the scene of an exciting incident, and the young lady, Miss Emma Nevison, alone in the shop at the time, was equal to the occasion, and her bravery and keen judgment saved the firm a neat little sum of money. A man who had passed and repressed the bakery, entered, and seeing Miss Nevison, who is a woman of slight build, said: 'I want you to give me some money.' She told him she would give him a loaf of bread if he was hungry. He did not want bread, and, becoming angry, said, 'D—n you, I'll show you whether you will or not!' and pulled a revolver. Nothing daunted, Miss Nevison replied, 'If that is what you are going to do, I'll show you what I'll do,' and she made an attempt to open the money draw to get a revolver. At this brave act the sneak turned and left the shop in a hurry, and that was the last seen of him. Miss Nevison called Mr. LaFraugh, who was at supper, and that gentleman notified Marshal Ulrich, who answered the call at once. The fellow had skipped, however, and could not be found. He had been seen in that vicinity a number of times during the day, especially on the opposite side of the street. Miss Nevison is the sister of Mrs. LaFraugh, and has been clerking in the shop ever since she has been in the city. There was considerable money in the drawer at the time, and it was through her bravery that it was saved. She showed more nerve than many of her sex would have done under like circumstances."

Peat Near Peterborough.

The Peterborough Morning Times of the 2nd inst. says:

"The Times is informed that a valuable peat bog exists on what is known as the 'Old Beaver-meadow' property, just outside the boundary of Ashburnham, in Otonabee, and only a couple of miles from town. The property has been inspected, and is now, it is said, in the hands of a syndicate, who propose to work it for all it is worth. The times was told yesterday that the property is a very valuable one, and contains a vast quantity of peat, which can be converted into fuel at a trifling cost. Those interested are having soundings made of the depth of the bog, and an estimate prepared of the quantity of peat. If this is satisfactory, as it is expected to be, the necessary plant will be ordered and operations begun. It is the development of our great peat fields that will make Canada independent of the United States in the matter of fuel. Should this new discovery result in the establishment of a peat works almost in the town itself, it will be a great thing for Peterborough. Mr. A. L. Davis, of town, who is one of the 'fathers' of peat fuel, and who has spent so much time and money in the work of treating the raw peat and making it fit for fuel, will soon, we believe, see the full realization of his dreams."

Millinery Opening.

On Friday and Saturday of last week the millinery department of Mr. Wm. Campbell's store was thronged with ladies taking advantage of the opening display to choose their fall and winter headwear. Miss Shannon's taste and skill in millinery were amply demonstrated in many beautifully trimmed samples, and numberless ready-to-wear and untrimmed shapes gave adequate idea of the season's styles. Foremost among the trimmed hats was a handsome turban in brown stitched velvet, with a brown feather encircling the brim, a white liberty satin ribbon looped at the left side of front, and a sash of fringed white ribbon falling over the back. A beautiful toque was of white camel's hair trimmed simply with white ribbon and a handsome black osprey. A couple of pearl ornaments held the folds in place. An elegant sample Paris hat in soft grey velvet was much admired. The brim was of fancy wool braid and the crown draped in velvet, with a large flat bow of stitched velvet at the back. A unique arrangement of small stitched bows fastened with steel buckles adorned the under brim. Another beautiful pattern hat had a crown of fawn camel's hair, with folds of exquisite brown velvet and ribbon about the brim. An exceedingly handsome quill was extended around the side and left front. Ends of the felt and ribbon were gracefully arranged at the back. An attractive brown felt turban was draped with brown plush and cream lace, with a knotting of brown and pale blue velvet finishing the under brim. An Antoinette hat composed of black braid edged with chenille, and a pair of white-flecked Mercury wings at each side made a simple and artistic trimming. Amongst the many pretty hats for children was one in fawn and white beaver. The crown was of fawn tuckered silk, gathered into a small steel cocoon. A large old rose rosette gave a touch of color. Another was of green camel's hair in the new flop style, and was simply trimmed with a scarf of green velvet around the crown and falling over the back. A couple of handsome pearl ornaments and a pretty grey feather completed the effect.
