

B. B. RED GAMES.

They Lead the Way and Some of Them Bring Fancy Prices.

The Black Breasted Red games stand at the head of the game birds all over the world. They hardly need description, so well known are they. An important point is what is called station, and with the majority this means length of leg. We see many at our eastern shows that readily poke their heads through the top of the exhibition coop to look about or to crow. When in proper poise, the eye of the male is directly over the line of the shank. The original type was much like our Brown Leghorn males in shape and carriage. The unnatural carriage of the present type has not pleased a large army of English fanciers, and the result has been the revival of the Old English game. The recent contention as to the possibility of raising such games as the present type of standard games has had a lively inning in The American Fancier. At the same time real good ones are quite scarce, and we do not see any very large number of them with us in a whole year, but those who are fortunate enough to produce a few of them are able to dispose of them quickly at a better price than is paid for the average cow or horse, and surely they cannot call for equal trouble and expense in the rearing as must go to the bringing of either the cow or the horse to selling age.—Feather, Lives Well on Ten Acres.

A good friend of ours, the owner of only ten acres of good land, lives as comfortably and happily on the products of this little farm as any man on a much larger place. He keeps a pair of brood mares, which raise him two good draft colts each year, barring accidents; he keeps two good cows, three or four pigs, about seventy-five hens and a few stands of bees; he keeps about two acres in small fruit—strawberries, raspberries, currants, gooseberries—grows three or four acres of potatoes each year, an acre of broom corn which he works up into brooms in the winter, an acre of onions and the rest of his land in corn. He raises very large crops, for he plows deep, fertilizes his land heavily and takes good care of all crops while growing. He has in addition a plum orchard and a big asparagus bed, which both bring in quite a nice little sum each year. He told us that he lived well and saved a little money each year, and yet there are lots of men who really believe that they cannot live on less than 160 acres.

Starting Tomato Plants.

The New Hampshire experiment station has made some tests with methods of starting tomato plants. In one test the plants were transplanted into small boxes so arranged that the bottom would be easily removed and the dirt allowed to slip out, and in the other they were transplanted into four inch pots. When the pots were used, the plants matured and bore fruit earlier than the plants in the first experiment. The station notes that "while the pot station takes more time and occupies more space, yet from the experiments made it surely pays." Another experiment showed that the kind of soil in which the tomatoes were planted seemed to have an effect on the amount of rot produced. Where the soil was inclined to dry out the rot was more prevalent, while on a loamy, moist soil there was very little rot.

Oats Better Than Barley.

In careful experiments conducted at the North Dakota experiment station by Prof. J. H. Sheppard, it was shown that threshed oats fed to work horses in connection with timothy hay gave slightly better results than barley. Horses and mules do not relish barley as well as oats and as a consequence they do not eat as large a quantity. These tests also showed that mules take less kindly to barley than horses. Where the work is not too severe, barley is a fairly satisfactory feed. This test emphasizes the opinion prevalent among horse raisers, that no other grain feed equals oats. It further has the advantage of carrying so large a proportion of husk to berry that it is bulky and for that reason is less liable to prove injurious if fed in comparatively large quantities.

Pasture for Swine.

Where clover pasture is not available for hogs it is advisable to sow small pieces of rape at successive periods during the spring months. These may be pastured off in turn. When a plot is eaten off and the pigs removed, the rape will start up from the roots.

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. A postmaster is required to give notice by letter (returning the paper does not answer the law), when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office and state the reasons for its not being taken. Any neglect to do so makes the postmaster responsible to the publisher for payment.
2. If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrearages, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether it is taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until the payment is made.
3. Any person who takes a paper from the post-office, whether directed to his name or another, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay.
4. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post-office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he uses.
5. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncalled for, is prima facie evidence of intentional fraud.
