

whom made, to destroy the kindly relations that have ever existed between them and the Methodists. Let their good sense, if not Christian charity, point out to them that the Methodists have no cause to be jealous, for the Presbyterians' prosperity does not mean any loss either pecuniarily or numerically to them—they have a church and pastor of which they have not the slightest need to be ashamed, and the religious prejudices with which we are born, or acquire very shortly after birth, generally keep us loyal to the church of our fathers. It may be possible that some Methodists may have given expression to sentiments that were indiscreet, but the entire body should not be judged by the words of one or two members. "Our sister churches are jealous of our prosperity, but let us return them nothing but charity"; these words were spoken in the old church a few weeks ago, and, if the sentiment of jealousy did exist, was the noblest advice that could be given, and characterizes sentiments that should ever be fostered; but many are unkind enough to say that the speaker of the gracious words and the writer of the letter signed Resident in the last Gazette (redolent as it is with anything but charity to the sister church) are the same person. Let us hope that such is not the case, and that the heads of the churches referred to and the leading members of these bodies will exert their utmost to maintain the true principles which should, and I believe do, exist; for there is abundant room in our village for the expenditure of all the energy of both bodies in combating with the evil amongst us and spreading the message of divine love, and to not let their services be but a caricature of that "greatest thing in the world." A great deal more might be said, and Resident treated to a little of his own medicine, for which he leaves the way temptingly open; but that is not my object, which is only to prevent a rupture of the kind relations that have always existed amongst us.

Truly yours,
SEMPER IDEM.
May 28th, 1895.

To the Editor of the Fenelon Falls Gazette.

Sir,—
In your last issue there was a letter signed by Resident in reply to Listener. Had he signed his name "Blatherskite" or "Empty-head" he would have given a name more in keeping with his letter. As he has not discussed the subject at all, but merely entered into an abusive strain against me, I will not think worth while to answer his scriptural quotations or sarcasm, but will touch on one or two points (?) of his letter. If Presbyterians mix their affairs with municipal affairs, then their affairs become my affairs and the affairs of every ratepayer of the village, and are open for discussion.

He says it is a bona fide transaction. Is it? Have any papers been passed? If purchased now by the council, would it not save expense to let the deed be drawn direct from the trustees of the corporation, and save the expense of a middle deed to Mr. McLeod first?

Can the council speculate in real estate and make an agreement for expenditure for a few years ahead when there is no real surplus? There is no saving worth speaking of, even if it were a good investment. When you count interest on the unpaid capital invested, expenses of repair, and insurance, with the annual loss of about $15 taxes—after it would have been turned into two nice private dwellings—it would not be much of an investment. So that I come back to the old saying, "the wish was father to the thought," and the Presbyterian council thought it would be nice to buy the old church for a town hall!

As for Resident's last remark regarding the help to the Methodists 18 years ago, I say "Shame to you, Resident, to try to raise ill feelings between any two religious bodies by 'slinging mud'!" I could say mean things here, too, but would not do so simply because paper will carry ink, because I would be sorry to see anything done which would separate any two churches farther apart than they are. Why single out Methodists? Are there not other churches in town too?

Before the next issue of your paper the matter will likely have been settled one way or the other, so I will not promise any reply to any further nonsense from Resident. Thanking you for your valuable space, I remain,

Yours, etc,
LISTENER.

May 29th, 1895.

To the Editor of the Fenelon Falls Gazette.

Sir,—
I see the ball is kept rolling re the Presbyterian old church—Resident has given it a kick towards Listener, with the evident intention of hitting him hard—and as this is a game of blind man's buff, let us waste in and kick time about. Resident mentions two kinds of proverbs, and he thinks he has answered Listener according to the second, but he has not observed that he has fallen hopelessly into the rut of the first. He forgets that in lunatic asylums each inmate thinks they are all fools except himself, and the greatest idiot amongst them thinks him self the wisest of the lot.

Resident is evidently a Presbyterian, and is in a fit of ill nature about something. I suppose he is a descendant of those Scotchmen for whose use the Duke of Argyle set up posts along the roads in certain localities in Scotland, for the use of needy travellers; but as there are no such posts in Canada our friend must have made use of the corner of the old church, and scratched rather hard, and feels so sore from the friction that he is mad and kicks at anything that comes along—so, boy-like, let us kick back.

I have my own doubts about the Presbyterians managing their business wisely. He accuses Listener of hearing too much, and it is well known that those who listen seldom hear any good of themselves, nevertheless he is a jolly good fellow and only pokes fun at the Presbyterians. Resident gets angry, which shows that he has made himself ridiculous by "answering a fool according to his folly," and retorts that he (Listener) has not soul enough in him to be either a Freemason or Presbyterian.

Mr. Editor, what is the rule for measuring the soul of an individual? And the silly d—y must attack the Methodist body, and let the public know that their church was built 18 years ago and is in debt yet, after all the financial aid given them by the Presbyterians. If the Presbyterians were as wise as they pretend to be they would unite with the Methodists, for it would be cheaper to help them to pay off the balance of that debt, for if many of the Presbyterian subscribers are like some of them that I know they will be also 18 years in debt for their church.

Now, sir, about the business ability of our council: if they want to buy a hall why not buy Dickson's? It is more suitable, and will not be dearer in the end than the old church.

One thing more, Mr. Editor, which I almost overlooked. Resident says "it is degrading to the cause of religion to see such a spirit as is manifested in this village just now, and finds expression through Listener." Benighted Presbyterians! for this sentiment is on a par with the style of preaching to which they are often treated. I will leave it to the whole community and a Scottish jury to decide which of the two authors slanders common sense and decency the most. "Oh, wad some power the giftie gie us: to see ourselves as others see us!"

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space in affording us room to air our own conceit. Next!
