The Fenelon Falls Gazette.

Friday, June 7th, 1895.

Commandant Booth.

Commandant Booth, the head of the Salvation Army in Canada, visited the Falls on Thursday of last week, and delivered an address at night in the Methodist church, which, though a very large building, was filled to its utmost capacity. The members of the Army in Fenelon Falls and its vicinity are more numerous than they were a year or two ago, but so many of them were unable to leave their employment that only about twenty were at the station to receive the Commandant when he arrived by the afternoon train. As he walked up the main street at the head of his followers he was, of course, the "observed of all observers," and he bowed slightly to every little knot of persons he passed on his way to the barracks, where he ate and slept during his stay in the village. He is a rather tall, very straight and well featured man in the prime of life, and his plain dark uniform sets off his good figure to advantage and gives him a very soldierly appearance. The address, though earnest and well delivered, was somewhat of a disappointment, as there was scarcely anything in it that his audience had not heard or read before; but, as the Commandant observed, it was difficult for him to speak of an organization of which his father was the originator and with which he himself is so closely identified. There was a collection at the door and another at the close of the address, and the contributions, though individually small, were so numerous that they must have amounted to a considerable sum.

The Drinking Water Question.

The question as to whether the old Presbyterian church is to be purchased by the municipality appears to have been settled in the negative, as not a word was said about it at the council meeting on Monday night, and in its place has arisen the question as to what is to be done about the supply of drinking water brought down by Mr. Jackett last summer through underground pipes from the spring at the head of Colborne street. Owing to the fact that there are very few wells south of Bond street, and that in some of those few the water is of an inferior quality, it was proposed some years ago that the council should do what Mr. Jackett has done, but a vast majority of the residents of the well watered region "kicked," and said they would be hanged (or something a great deal worse) before they would submit to be taxed for what would be of no benefit to them; and, as the attempt to raise money by subscriptions met with but little success, the project fell through, and bad water was drunk, or good water carried long distances, as before. But last year Mr. Jackett, who is of an enterprising and speculative turn of mind, figured out that he could make money by supplying good drinking water to those who needed it, if the council would give him permission to lay pipes underground along the side of Colborne street. The required permission having been given so readily and unconditionally that many ratepayers found fault with the members of the council for their complaisance, Mr. Jackett went to work and, in spite of all obstacles (including a lawsuit), brought his enterprise to a successful issue, and triumphantly verified his prediction that the water would run as freely in winter as in summer, and would laugh at the attempts of Jack Frost to prevent it. Now, if the quid pro quo—otherwise dollars—would flow into Mr. Jackett's pocket as readily as his water flows into the pails and pitchers of those who go to where he has it on tap, everything would be lovely; but unfortunately his anticipations as to the pecuniary results of his aqueduct have not been realized, and his attempt to increase them by charging excursionists a cent each for a drink of water has excited much indignant comment in town and country, and impressed Mr. John Kelly, deputy reeve of Verulam, so unfavorably that on Wednesday forenoon he delivered an oration on the subject from the seat of his milk wagon, while his horses were imbibing fluid refreshment from Mr. Jackett's trough at the corner of Colborne and Francis streets. No one can blame Mr. Jackett, who cannot be expected to furnish water for nothing; but we agree with Mr. Kelly that it will be a disgrace to Fenelon Falls, as well as an injury, if it go abroad that a visitor to the village cannot get a cup of water without paying for it. The fountain at which the charge was made—or, rather, attempted to be made—is opposite the McArthur House but on the other side of the street; and Mr. Jackett says that before he erected it, a month or so ago, he was under the impression, from a conversation he had with two members of the council, that they would favor a grant of $50 if the fountain were left unenclosed and free to all, but at their next meeting the council offered him $25, which he would not accept. Mr. Jackett has been unfairly treated by the farmers and townspeople who promised to pay for the water and now refuse or neglect to do so, and we think the simplest way out of the trouble will be for the council to buy him out, if he will accept a fair sum, extend the system, and assess those who benefit by it to the extent that is found necessary. When the public fountain was erected in Bobcaygeon several years ago, Mr. John Kelly, who was then, as now, a member of the Verulam council, moved that the township grant $35 towards it, and the motion was carried without, as far as we have heard, any grumbling by the farmers who lived so much nearer to the Falls than they seldom visited 'Caygeon. Here we have three interested townships, Fenelon, Verulam and Somerville, to ask aid from, and it is not likely that either of them would refuse a few dollars. At any rate, something will have to be done, as the present condition of affairs is very unsatisfactory—even the carrying of keys to the locked boxes by those who have them being a nuisance—and it would be far better for the water to be common property than for squabbles to arise through a private owner trying to enforce payment and a whole lot of customers endeavoring to evade it.

Butter Making.

By an advertisement in another column it will be seen that the peripatetic dairy sent out by the Ontario Government to instruct the farmers and farm-meresses of Ontario in the art of gilt-edged butter making will be at Fenelon Falls on Friday next, the 14th inst., and we cannot too strongly urge upon our readers, especially upon those residing in the country, the advisability of attending. For some time past Canadian cheese has been in very high repute upon the English market, but the very reverse is the case as regards Canadian butter; and the difference is attributable to the fact that the cheese is turned out of factories, where it is made in large quantities upon scientific principles, while the butter is collected from tens of thousands of farm-houses, the inmates of some of which are too careless to make even a fairly good article, while the inmates of others don't know how. Of course, before butter can be profitably exported, it will have to be made of uniform quality in creameries (the number of which is rapidly increasing), but, unlike cheese, the quantity required for home consumption will probably always be made at home, as the necessary appliances are few and cheap and the modus operandi very simple; yet, from want of the knowledge imparted by the travelling dairy, farmers' families all over the Dominion anoint their daily bread with barely palatable grease, instead of with butter fit to set before a king, and that would not cost a fraction of a cent more per pound. Go to the travelling dairy meeting, where you will get a great deal of valuable information free of charge; if you don't make use of it afterwards it will be your own fault.

Mrs. Robert Cameron and two children and Miss Bella Cameron arrived at the Falls last Saturday from Orillia, King County, Washington, U. S., and will probably remain for several weeks.

Mr. R. J. Henry, V. S., left the Falls on Monday morning for Mono Mills, Ont., where he will practice his profession. He made many warm friends while here, and all will join in wishing him the success he so justly merits.

Messrs. Edward Bell, Albert Brokenshire, Thos. McDiarmid, Robert Menzies Jr., Albert Menzies, Angus Fountain and Wm. Johnston, who left on April 16th to accompany a drive of Rathbun's logs from Irondale to the Falls, arrived here on Wednesday forenoon.

LECTURE.—On Monday evening, in Dickson's hall, the Rev. J. Tate Kilts, Pioneer Medical Missionary to the interior of North China, will deliver a deeply interesting illustrative lecture on "Chi-na and the Chinese." For particulars see bills. Admission 15c. and 10c.

M. McCallum has just received his second order of Spring goods, which are being sold cheap.

THE GLORIOUS TWELFTH.—The Orangemen of the district have decided upon holding this year's 12th of July celebration at Fenelon Falls, and, if the weather be at all favorable, there will no doubt be a big crowd in town. We hope the order for the posters will not be delayed, as is too often the case, until there is barely time to give proper notice. They ought to be printed and circulated by the 15th inst. at the latest, as, if it be not known that the celebration is to take place at the Falls, excursions that will to some extent conflict with it may be arranged for.

YOU CAN SAVE money by calling on M. McCallum for a spring suit two doors south of the post office.
