Cecil Rhodes's Death Reported.

London, September 2.—A rumor prevailed here to-day that Right Hon. Cecil J. Rhodes, Prime Minister of Cape Colony, has died at Capetown, but no confirmation of the rumor can be obtained in any quarters. Mr. Rhodes has been Prime Minister of Cape Colony since July 17th, 1890, when he assumed office on the fall of the Spriggs Ministry. He has been very prominent in South African affairs, and was chairman of the British South Africa Company. When in England in 1891 he gave £10,000 to the Irish Home Rule fund.

Editor Stead thinks that Mr. Rhodes is the third greatest Englishman, Gladstone and Salisbury coming ahead. Rhodes was something over 40 years of age, and was estimated to be worth about $30,000,000. He was the younger son of a Church of England clergyman, went to the Cape, made a colossal fortune in the diamond mines, and returned to England. But that life did not suit his taste. He again returned to the Cape, went into politics, and was the master mind of that portion of the Queen's dominions.

Rhodes was emphatically a strong man. In South Africa they looked upon him as their Bismarck. Full of ambitious schemes, of which he made no secret, he was English to the core, and thoroughly an Imperialist. He planned a consolidated British empire, embracing the choicest portions of the globe. In this empire South Africa was to take a leading part. One of his recent projects was a telegraph line from Cairo to Cape Town, by way of Zanzibar and the great lakes, and by means of the war in Matabeland he pursued his plan that the English might possess every inch of soil in the southern half of the continent fit for the habitation of white men. A dozen years ago, at Kimberley, he stood before a map of Africa. He placed his hand across the interior up to the mouth of the Congo and the great lakes and said: "All that shall be English. That is my dream."

His dream seems to be coming true, for the English, under his leadership, are pushing northward, and it is believed that the Germans will abandon their possessions in South Africa. The Portuguese can be driven out. Then the English flag will fly from the southern ocean up to the limits marked by Rhodes. There is no land beyond that line and below the Sahara for which a white man need care. In appearance Rhodes was a typical Englishman in every respect. He neither spoke, wrote nor conversed well. His eminence has been gained without any of these gifts.

Canadian Cattle.

Cattle shippers have now fully reached the conclusion that no hope whatever remains of a removal of the embargo upon Canadian cattle at British ports. Leading men in the trade assembled at Montreal on Thursday. Among them, besides the local shippers, were men from all parts of Ontario, and one from Manitoba. A resolution was passed asking Sir Charles Tupper to insist that the Imperial Government take advantage of the Canadian Government's offer to send out at the latter's expense experts to free Canadian cattle shippers of the injustice under which they now labor, by satisfying the Imperial authorities that undoubtedly pleuro does not exist among our Canadian herds. But this resolution was intended merely to serve as means of vindication. That the British Government has deliberately and finally resolved to exclude Canadian cattle on the hoof is considered proved by certain circumstances. British farmers have had a hard time lately; the value of their cattle has increased £2 or so per head since Canadian cattle were embargoed; they have votes. That is the whole story. A protective duty could not be imposed in a free trade country, but sanitary restrictions can be made to do duty instead. Of course, the British Government, Liberal or Tory, does not want to know that there is no pleuro in Canada. It is like the Scotchman who said he was open to conviction, but he would like to see the man who could convince him. The deck companies at British ports have lately spent thousands of pounds in lairages, etc., which they would not have done if they had not felt assured that hereafter Canadian cattle are not to be allowed to pass on into the interior.

Having abandoned the notion of doing business on the old basis, the cattle shippers now want the Dominion Government to enter into a reciprocal arrangement with the United States whereby quarantine regulations will be so far removed that American cattle can be shipped at Montreal or Canadian at New York. If it can be shown that the United States is quite as free from pleuro as Canada, there is no reason why such an arrangement should not be made. American cattle, we presume, would be quarantined as closely as possible in their passage through Canada, and Canadian shippers could be trusted to preserve the higher reputation and selling value of their own stock.—Kingston News.

Rivierre's Wonderful Record.

The most talked of cyclist in France at present is Gaston Rivierre, the long distance rider who recently made a new world's record for 24 hours. He covered 523 miles and 1,044 yards in that time, and the marvelous performance has given him worldwide fame among riders of the silent steed. Rivierre is looked upon as one of the most remarkable riders in Europe. Five men, all noted riders, including Lewis, Lucas, Williams and Ramat, started in this race, and Rivierre's victory, coming so soon after Huret's remarkable 24 hour ride of 514 miles, has created the wildest excitement among the long distance riders.

Rivierre, who is now the holder of the world's record for 24 hours, was born at Asnieux on June 3rd, 1862, and is therefore already over 33 years of age, a fact which makes his performance the more creditable. In 1884 he entered the military school at St. Cyr, but soon after he gave up the military career. About five years ago he took to cycling, and in 1893 was the first of the road racers in the Bordeaux-Paris. In 1894 he was the victor in the Lyons-Paris-Lyons 1,040 kilometers race, and last year he won the 1,000 kilometers race at the Velodrome d'Hiver, on which occasion he beat the then 24 hour record by covering 493 miles.

"It's Victory."

The Templar, the leading prohibition paper of Canada, hails with delight "the fusion of the forces of reform in the prairie provinces." From an editorial on the result of the recent convention in Winnipeg, which it heads "It's Victory," we take the following: "It will be just such independence and devotion to principle as this convention has shown that will save the politics of this country from passing under the complete control of the liquor sellers."

"The resolutions adopted show that the convention has no further use for the old political parties and is thoroughly agreed to secure prohibition through the only party—the Patron—which has committed itself to the principle and policy of Prohibition. The declaration of the Manitoba government's unfaithfulness to its Prohibition pledge appears unanswerable in the light of all the facts known to us."

"No student of current events can fail to see that we are on the eve of a complete readjustment of political parties and the adoption of new issues—moral and vital to the national well-being. Too long the political hucksters have bartered national honor and prosperity for the spoils of office; and this they did because the electors were content to have it so. Now, however, the moral sense of the electorate is awaking, and the responsibilities of citizenship are being felt by thousands heretofore indifferent, who will insist upon a recognition of those questions which involve the purity and protection of the home, and therefore the security and prosperity of the nation."—The Independent, Manitou, Man.
