Britain in the East.

LORD ROBERTS WARNS ENGLISHMEN TO PREPARE FOR STARTLING DEVELOPMENTS.

New York, Dec. 9.—The Sun's London cable says: The slow development of the Turkish crisis is enabling far-sighted Englishmen to give more attention to the situation in the Far East, which it is beginning to be recognized is fraught with greater dangers to British interests than the Constantinople difficulties. The most significant words yet spoken on this subject are contained in an important speech, on Wednesday, by Lord Roberts, who is not only one of England's highest military authorities, but is a man who possesses an intimate knowledge of the whole question of the Indian Empire, and its relations with China and Japan trade. His most pregnant sentence was: "If England intends to maintain her commercial supremacy in the East, she must be prepared for events even more startling and unexpected than those which have occurred in the past twelve months." Lord Roberts then proceeded to give definiteness to his remarks by intimating, in pretty plain language, that the British Indian possessions are distinctly threatened. He argued that the policy of keeping ourselves to ourselves, and disregarding everything that takes place beyond the frontier of the northwest of India, is no longer applicable to the present conditions under which the English occupy India. The question as to the proper means for securing the integrity of India is not merely a military question, but is equally urgent from a political point of view. He would, therefore, not further enlarge on the matter. The moral to be drawn was that, if England hoped to hold her own as one of the great powers and retain her foreign possessions, she must, cost what it might, be mistress of the seas, and, besides having a sufficiency of war ships and a full complement of sailors to man them, she must have a well-organized, a well-equipped, a well-trained army ready to be transported wherever the presence of British soldiers is required.

Lessons from the Census of 1880 to 1890.

Detroit has grown.....	89,000
Buffalo has grown.....	99,000
Total.....	188,000
The whole Province of Ontario....	186,000
St. Paul and Minneapolis have increased.....	210,000
British Columbia, Northwest Territories, Manitoba, Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island combined have only grown.....	188,000
Michigan, west of us, has increased 453,000 Nearly three times as much as Ontario.
Ohio, south of us.....	468,000
New York, east of us.....	898,000
Cleveland has grown.....	101,000
Nearly as much as the whole Province of Quebec, including the leading city, Montreal.

What is the reason? Would those American States and cities grow as they do, if they had not freedom to trade with each other? Why would we not do as well as they, if we had the same freedom?

Garcia, the Mexican, who was hanged at St. Quinton, Cal., for murder, left a confession that he had slain eleven men.

Captain Dreyfus, a French officer, who was sentenced to penal servitude for selling military secrets to other powers, is said to have made his escape.

Scott Act Romance.

HIS SWEETHEART WOULD PAY HIS FINE IN INSTALMENTS.

The Scott Act has often been charged with invading the rights of the citizens, but it remained for the Sussex, N. B., "Record" to announce its most serious invasion of even love's retreat. It says: "They say that the course of true love never runs smooth, and there is a young Scott Act offender now in Hampton jail who believes this statement. He was taken there from Sussex some three weeks ago, and is now serving out a 160 days' sentence in default of the payment of a $100 fine. It appears he had been out of work for some time, and not wishing to leave the object of his adoration, who resides near here, had gone to work with the parties who sold the ardent. While there he was unfortunate enough to be captured by the inspector, and received the sentence as stated before. It is at this point that the real romance of the affair comes in. As soon as the young woman heard of her lover's troubles she went to Hampton and offered to pay $30 down and $5 a month till the fine was paid. The officials, while admiring her loyalty, had not the power to grant the young man his liberty on this instalment plan method."

Baffled Burglars.

One can easily imagine the chagrin of two London burglars, who after much ill-placed ingenuity and unaccustomed labor, succeeded in breaking into a building which they thought was a bank, but which proved to be the offices of the Camberwell Board of Guardians. They ransacked the place from floor to ceiling, but the only item of interest they found was the entry of their own names amongst the records of casual paupers. "S'ilp me," whispered one, "this 'ere's a sell, ain't it? Let's get orf at wunst." "We must take something," answered the other; "why 'ere's some laces," and he picked up a packet of cords used by the clerks for filing documents. "I ain't got much boots to speak of," he continued; but I'll give 'em new laces." So he took off the decayed masterpieces of shoemaker's art which he wore, and was proceeding to put folio laces into them when suddenly a watchman turned on his lantern. The men made a dash for liberty, and, while the guardian rushed away for a moment to obtain help, managed to escape by breaking a window. The boots, however, were left behind, also a quantity of blood, which one of them had lost through cutting himself with a piece of broken glass. In the afternoon of the same day two men, named John Murphy and Thomas Riley, presented themselves for admission to the Camberwell casual ward, one of them minus his shoes and the other suffering from a severe cut on one arm. They were identified by the watchman and committed for trial.

Buried Treasure.

A strange story of the Indian mutiny, related by an old soldier, has just led to the formation in Calcutta of a syndicate for the purpose of digging up a treasure valued at 60 lakhs of rupees, now said to be buried in a certain spot in the Unao district of Oudh. It is alleged that the veteran, in the course of one of the many engagements which took place in Oudh during 1857-58, shot a rebel leader, on whose person he found a copper tablet inscribed with some strange writings and designs. The soldier preserved this tablet, and after the mutiny entered the service of the Government, from which he will shortly retire on a pension. A few months ago he showed this tablet to one of the governors of a certain bank, who, being struck with the story told in connection with it, had it translated. The inscription cut on it proved to be in the old Hindu character, and contained minute directions as to the finding in a certain place of a treasure in gold, silver and jewels valued at sixty lakhs. The exact spot was purchased and a bungalow built over the hidden hoard, and in the course of a couple of months, if things prove to be as described on the tablet, the members who form the syndicate will each receive three lakhs, the State being entitled to a share of all treasure trove, and ten lakhs being the share of the soldier.
