n English Doctor Who Accuses His Pro. fessional Brethren of Humbug.

Dr. J. Burney Yeo of England has published an elaborate article on "Medicine and Society" which has stirred up the medical profession. The lines have of late been drawn very tight around the regular school of medicine. It was supposed almost that its members could do no wrong. They were regarded as infallible, and legislation has conferred upon the profession very great privileges. It therefore causes a shock to have one of the leading lights of the profession stand up and declare that medical men are guilty of a vast amount of quackery and humbug, that they charge exorbitant fees for small services, that they are arbitrary and unjust in their relations to society, and jealous and mean in their relations to one another. All this Dr. Yeo alleges.

He first deals with the specialists who confine their attention to a single organ, such as the nose, liver, kidneys, or lungs. These specialists whom the public esteems so highly, Dr. Yeo regards as a very low plane, and a degradation to the profession. He says that a man of very limited ability can in a short time acquire a certain familiarity in the management of a single organ, and by merely identifying himself with the treatment of that organ, and compiling some work on the subject, however small its merit, he is able to advertise himself well?" and she was such a dear, faith- which will be mailed free to anyone desir-

and earn a large income. Moreover, he soon begins to charge large fees. Dr. Yeo thinks that society is beginning to resent the increased cost of medical and surgical help and getting to look on the members of the medical profession as more mercenary and less disinterested than they were wont to be. Thus the relations between the profession and society are to some extent less cordial. Cases are now frequent in law courts which testify to this fact.

Dr. Yeo's views as to extravagant charges of specialists is amply confirmed by every-day experience in New York city. Quite recently a specialist for the brain acknowledged charging $1,200 for a pretended operation which was never performed, and the writer of this article That Was What Happened a Well Known recently saw a bill for $500, charged for an operation on the eye which did not occupy more than three minutes. To this amount $250 was added for two weeks' board in the eye specialists private hospital, making $750 in all for an operation for which $50 would have been ample compensation.

Another trouble that exists between physicians and society relates to the socalled etiquette by which society is coerced in the selection of consultants. Physicians claim the right to name the doctor who shall be called in consultation, and the consent of the attending physician is absolutely necessary before any consultation can be held. Should the patient desire the aid of a physician belonging to a different school of medicine from that in which the attending physician has been educated, a peremptory refusal is at once given. Dr. Yeo considers this dictatorial conduct of the medical profession unjust and likely to bring it into disrepute; in fact, he denounces such acts "as trade union restrictions." Society claims perfect freedom to consult whom it chooses. either privately or in the presence of the family physician, and Dr. Yeo, speaking simply as a citizen, says he has no doubt on this point; that society is in the right.

Lastly, there is the burning question of unprofessional advertising. Dr. Yeo declares that the obstacles interposed to prevent a rising young physician from making his name publicly known are based on

HUMBUG AND HYPOCRISY.

"We all seek publicity in one form or another," he says. "We advertise our colleges, hospitals, books, lectures, and appointments, and we delight in various forms of indirect advertising. Interprofessional advertising is practised constantly and freely by the most distinguished members of the profession, and it has always struck me as a very remarkable thing that, while advertising within the profession is practised so extensively without incurring any adverse criticism, the smallest notice in the publie journals should excite such animosity, and this conduct is peculiar to the medical profession.

"With the legal profession the practice is quite contrary. Whoever is clever enough in that profession to make himself a reputation with the public is commended for his skill and ability, and what would be thought disreputable would be for lawyers to advertise themselves among lawyers. On the other hand, physicians endeavor to attract the notice of other physicians by every means in their power. What would be thought in the legal profession for a lawyer to distribute among other lawyers a paper or pamphlet entitled 'On a New and Successful Method of Defence in Actions for Libels?' And yet this is the kind of thing which all doctors do as a means of advertising themselves." Dr. Yeo continues that he is confident of speaking within the limit when he says that three-fourths of the medical works published every year are for the purpose of advertising the author's specal business. In conclusion he tells his medical friends that the real objection to public advertising lies in the fact that "you doctors are so jealous of one an-

DROPPED ON THE STREET.

From the News, Union, B.C.

A little over a year ago the reporter of the News while standing in front of the office, before its removal to Union, noticed four men carrying Mr. J. P. Davis, the well known florist and gardener into the Courtenay House. The reporter, ever on the alert for a news item, at once went over to investigate the matter, and learned that Mr. Davis had had a slight stroke of paralysis. A note of the circumstance appeared in the News at the time, and nothing further was heard of it. Last spring Mr. Davis was observed to be frequently in Union bringing in flowers, and later vegetables for sale, and the reporter meeting him one day, the following conversation took place:-" Glad to see you looking so well, Mr. Davis," said the reporter, "the last time I saw you you seemed pretty badly broken up."

"Yes," said Mr. Davis, "I did have a pretty tough time of it. I was troubled with my heart, having frequent severe spasms, and shortness of breath on slight exertion. I had also a swelling of the neck which was said to be goitre. Two years ago I came up from Nanaimo

I FELL DOWN ON THE STREET. change would do me good, but in this I was disappointed, and seemed to be steadily growing weaker. I had three doctors at different times, but they appeared not to understand my case. At last I got so low that one day I fell down on the street, and those who picked me up thought I was dying. After that I was urged to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and almost from the outset they helped me and after the use of about half a dozen boxes I was as well as ever." "Do you still take the Pink Pills?" asked the report-"Well," was the reply, "I still keep them about me and once in a while when I think I require a tonic I take a few, but as you can see I don't look like a man who requires to take medi-cine now." On this point the reporter quite agrees with Mr. Davis, as he looks as vigorous and robust a man as you could wish to see. After parting with Mr. Davis the reporter called at Pimbury & Co.'s drug store, where he saw the manager, Mr. Van Houten, who corroborated what Mr. Davis said regarding the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and further stated that he believed Pink Pills to be the finest tonic in the world, and gave the names of several who had found remarkable bene-

To all who apply, giving us the name of the paper in which they saw this notice, will be given an ingenious puzzle, the solving of which may earn you $50.00.

To test a wall coating, take a small quantity of it, mix in equal quantity of boiling water, and if it does not set when left in the dish over night, and finally form a stone-like cement without shrinking, it is a kalsomine, and dependent upon glue to hold it to the wall, the feature so strongly objected to by sanitarians.

This matter of looking to the sanitary nature of wall coatings seems to be considered of much importance of late. A supplement to the Michigan State Board of Health, condemns wall paper and kalsomines for walls, and recommends Alabastine as being sanitary, pure, porous, permanent, economical and beautiful. Alabastine is ready for use by mixing in cold water.
