Arrogance.

It is the policy of The Star to drop controversial topics after an issue has been decided, but the arrogance of Archbishop Langevin in claiming as his henchmen those he so bitterly opposed during the election, is too cheeky a performance to pass unmentioned. Mr. Tarte has spoken to His Grace of St. Boniface in a very sultry tone of voice, and probably the prelate will cease to assume to be the mouthpiece of those who did their best to prevent the passage of remedial legislation. To assume possession of and suzerainty over everything in sight is no new policy of the hierarchy, but the electors of Canada had hoped that such an arrogant demeanor would no longer be characteristic of prelates who so recently received so sound a drubbing. Mr. Laurier is doubtless aware that he cannot permit himself to be made one of a group of "living political pictures," to be thus exhibited by Archbishop Langevin as a feature of his procession. The Premier must be entirely devoid of political sagacity, and has not properly sized up the general revolt in this country against clericalism, if he permits His Grace of St. Boniface to assume that a popular verdict is meaningless, and in such an event he will deserve defeat as disastrous as his uplifting was sudden and great. The extraordinary and foolish posturing of the Church dignitaries was so conspicuous before the election, their complete expulsion from political influence was so evident when the campaign ended, that it seems almost unnecessary for the people of this or any other province to lie awake nights during the dog days wondering whether the Premier of the Dominion was properly observant of an event as evident and resounding as the fall of an avalanche.—Toronto Star.

"Noble and Memorable."

The Montreal Witness says:—"Mr. Laurier's oration on the occasion of his Ottawa triumph was noble and memorable. He proclaimed the birth of a nation. He rightly claimed for his own race the honors of the victory of honesty and popular independence, and denounced those who, after having in vain done their utmost to rouse the prejudices of that race to secure a victory for selfish interests, were now doing what they could to rouse the passions and prejudices of the other race by cries of French Domination and Quebec rule. The loyal Canadian will join Mr. Laurier in the hope that they may be as utterly unsuccessful in the one case as in the other. The victory that was celebrated last night was a victory over race prejudices; it was a wiping out of race lines; it was the making of a united people, proud of its completed nationality. The time has come when the Canadian nation must take bold steps ahead, feeling that confidence which rests in a sense of mutual loyalty. The time has come, as Mr. Laurier proclaimed, when the Canadian abroad, of whatever origin, will everywhere boast himself a Canadian."

Two Narrow Escapes.

The two extremely narrow escapes of Her Majesty, Victoria, despite the precaution of placing guards 30 or 40 feet apart all the way from Windsor to Marlborough House, are evidence of the danger that constantly threaten us in this uncertain life. A runaway and a conflagration added to the excitement of this excellent old lady's holiday. Happily the horses implicated in the runaway were not attached to the Queen's carriage, and, thanks be to heaven, the burning window curtains were in a part of the palace remote from Her Majesty; but we quite endorse the opinion of the London correspondents that these two incidents may be regarded as narrow escapes, for it was only through the intervention of Providence that in both instances the Queen happened to be somewhere else. If it were not that we are somewhere else when these distressing calamities occur, most of us would have been gathered to our fathers long ago. Let us not overlook this significant fact, and let us, as survivors, be duly grateful.—Chicago Post.

According to a Singapore paper, 60 per cent. of the cholera patients taken to the Pauper Hospital have been cured by hypodermic injections of strychnine, while fifty per cent. were saved in the General Hospital by other treatment.

Cyclists and the Law.

The cyclist with his wheel has penetrated the uttermost parts of the earth, and fortunately finds himself under the protection of the law, which generally affords him adequate justice whether he is the offender or the victim of offenders. One of the rapidly increasing brotherhood who was wheeling in far-off Algeria was recently the chief figure in a court incident, which, reading like an Oriental tale, gives an idea of the manner in which justice is there meted. He was in beset by a dog, was unceremoniously dismounted and his wheel broken, whereupon he cited the owner of the dog before the civil court and demanded fifty francs damages. After hearing the evidence of the wheelman and the dog owner, and seeing the wheel and the dog, the court rendered the following decision:

"Seeing that dogs are admittedly animated by hatred toward cyclists, and naturally delight in pursuing them; that at a time when cycling is so much in vogue, it is nevertheless necessary that these animals should, like everybody else, accustom themselves to that method of locomotion; that cyclists are indeed included among the passengers protected against dogs by art. 479, par. 7, of the penal code; that, on the other hand, those who cycle are naturally accustomed to accidents, and that the sum claimed as indemnity by the plaintiff on this head is exaggerated. For these reasons the court orders the defendant to pay the plaintiff the sum of 25 francs for damage to the machine, and the sum of 1 franc as compensation to the plaintiff for the inconvenience caused him by his fall."

Solomon in all his glorious wisdom could not have given a more elaborately erudite verdict, although our western barbaric ignorance makes us marvel why dogs any more than Lachine road toughs should particularly have any animosity against unoffending wheelmen. Still, as the Algerian canines have admittedly this prejudice, it seems no more than simple justice that they, "like everybody else," should be allowed to overcome it by familiarizing themselves with "that method of locomotion." Again, it is not exactly clear why a man should only get half damages because he is "accustomed to accidents," but the Algerian Solon was evidently impressed with that idea, and there is no ground for appeal. The Star simply mentions the fact for the benefit of those Montreal bicyclists who for obvious reasons meditate upon transferring their outings from the Lachine road to Algiers, or some other country where the Algerian style of justice prevails.—Montreal Star.

The Salmon Pack.

A Victoria, B. C., despatch says:—"Although prospects for a large salmon pack on the Fraser are very discouraging, northern canners are jubilant, as the run up there is unprecedented in the history of the salmon industry in northern waters. According to reports brought down by the steamer Danube, every cannery from Naas River to Rivers Inlet had during the past two weeks more salmon than it could conveniently handle. At Rivers Inlet the run is simply beyond description. The canneries were compelled to take off their boats, as they were glutted with fish and had no means of disposing of them. On the Naas the salmon were running regularly and every boat easily secured 150 and upwards. Both canneries there belong to the Federation Company and will easily secure a full pack. The Cascade cannery is not in operation this year. At the Skoena River the canneries have more fish than they can handle, and will easily put up a full pack. The Carlisle leads with 10,000 cases. The total northern pack, so far as estimated, is 160,000 cases, with good prospects of this being increased at least one-third more. Last year's total pack in northern canneries was 165,000 cases."

Mohammedan depositors in Post-office Savings Banks are enriching the British Government, as their religion forbids them to receive interest. They insist on taking out no more than they put in.

The city of Minden, Germany, is in trouble. Recently somebody stole from the military hospital at that place a number of white mice which had been innoculated with the germs of various contagious diseases, and nobody can tell where these dangers may now be lurking.
