Walking Right Into Death.

KLONDIKERS, CRAZED BY REPEATED FINDS, WON'T BE STOPPED BY THE COMING SNOW.

Seattle, Wash., Sept. 25.—One of the most distinguished passengers to arrive in this city on the steamer Queen from Alaska was Burton F. Bennett, who was sent north by Grover Cleveland to fill the office of United States district attorney for Alaska.

"The world at large may not realize it," said Mr. Bennett, "but there are men up north who are walking right into death. The snow is probably flying on White Pass, and, if not, soon will be. Many propose to winter at Skaguay, but, from what I can learn, hundreds do not propose to stop there, nor do they propose to return to civilization. They have the gold fever as no other body of men had it. Every time they hear of a strike in the Yukon country they get crazier than ever. They will not stop for the snow; they will not stop for storms; they will keep pushing over White Pass all winter. I am satisfied that while the snow is coming down in all its fury on the pass and the wind is blowing awful gales this winter, you will see men on the White Pass. It is a frightful thing to think of, but it is true, and these men should be stopped. I will not be surprised to learn of many deaths up there this winter. It is the most damnable rush I ever saw or read of. These men do not know anything about the horrors of White Pass in the winter time; yet they keep on, and, just about the time that winter is at its worst, some of them will be caught on White Pass. They will never escape. I am satisfied that those who remain at Skaguay this winter will be all right. Spring will soon be with them, and they can start for the north. Once there, they will all come back rich, if they are willing to stay and work for a few years. There is gold in every body of water, big or little, in the Yukon country. Why, the people, with all the newspaper talk, do not know what the rush will be in the coming spring. From the letters I have received from the States, there will be 10,000 people in Alaska six weeks after the spring rush commences. I think that the reports about so much crime in the vicinity of Skaguay have been exaggerated. We are doing what we can to see that order is preserved, and we have been fairly successful."

"What for?" asked the Englishman. "Mein herr did call ze Kaiser a fool," replied the man. "No, no, no," urged the 'cute Briton, "it was the Russian Emperor I was talking about." "Dat vill not vash," went on the constable. "Dere is no Emperor a fool except ze German Emperor." After which, Dame Rumor has it, the police officer and the Englishman agreed to keep each other's secret, and parted on good terms.

A German paper calls attention to the extraordinary fact that at Aachen alone 800 tons of steel wire are used annually in the manufacture of needles—4,500,000,000 in number, valued at $1,500,000.

The authorities of Milan have decided to stop sprinkling the streets on very warm days, on the ground that the process only aggravates the situation, as moist heat is much more disagreeable than dry heat. It is also argued that sprinkling favors the growth of injurious bacteria.

Ten Minutes For Manners.

It is certainly true that we are all prone to forget the many shortcomings of the companions of our early years, and yet one cannot help agreeing with the oft-repeated assertion that the children of to-day are not as respectful to their seniors and as observant of the rights of others as were those of a decade or two ago. This may be a result of changes in the social life of the community, or it may be a result of a school system which fills a child's head with catch questions and causes him to think that any grown person who cannot answer them is a fool. At all events, the modesty which was formerly said to adorn youth is rapidly becoming a thing of the past, and childhood takes upon itself to match its views with those of experience, and break its jest upon the head of age. All children, of course, by no means come under this category, but the tendency of the age is to develop the pert in preference to the modest child, and some may hold that this is progress. But if the old-fashioned theory be sound, that good breeding is in the interests of the child itself, then ten minutes a day would not be wasted in our Public schools if devoted to teaching children manners, not of the snob nor of society, so-called, but the manners which spring from respect for self, respect for age, and respect for worth.—Telegram.

A Picture From Merry England.

A correspondent sends to a London newspaper a deplorable picture of life at the present time among the hop pickers in Kent. The wretched weather and the dearth of bread have brought pitiable distress upon the hundreds of these pickers. Under every hedge bottom and in any corner at all protected from the weather, writes the correspondent, groups of woe-begone men, women and children were anxiously looking for any break in the clouds. These unfortunates were only one degree worse than the persons who have already been admitted to the wretched shelter afforded by the hoppers' camps. The hop-fields are pools of mud and slush. The poor-law authorities in Kent are not dealing with the situation. Nearly all the groups sit surrounded by their few household goods, and the blankets, and in a few cases bedding, are saturated with rain. The orchards are watched day and night to prevent thefts by the hungry hoppers. Many families have been reduced almost to starvation. So acute is the distress that a number of philanthropic people are every day going through the lanes distributing bread. A fresh loaf cannot be obtained in any of the principle parts of Kent for less than 5½d per quarter. Even the stale bread, which is usually sold by the gallon, has gone up in price.

An Imperial Fool.

A good (and true?) story is going the rounds which shows to what extent the violent ebullitions and caprices of the German Emperor are regarded in his own country. An English gentleman, says the Westminster Gazette, it appears, was walking with a friend in Under de Linden, and in the course of a discussion on the Kaiser's conduct committed a grievous error of Magistrate's-Beleidigung. "The Emperor's a fool," he exclaimed, whereupon an English-speaking police-officer tapped him on the shoulder and said—"You must come mid me to ze police station." "What for?" asked the Englishman. "Mein herr did call ze Kaiser a fool," replied the man. "No, no, no," urged the 'cute Briton, "it was the Russian Emperor I was talking about." "Dat vill not vash," went on the constable. "Dere is no Emperor a fool except ze German Emperor." After which, Dame Rumor has it, the police officer and the Englishman agreed to keep each other's secret, and parted on good terms.
