A WEDDING RING,

Being an investment for a lifetime, should not be purchased without some thought or knowledge of its suitability for the person you want it for, and to be restricted to a small selection is provoking and unwise. My stock consists of every fashionable shape—all the different thicknesses and widths—all sizes to fit anybody, and at very reasonable prices. You will find it very satisfactory to select from a stock like mine. You will save your car fare. If unable to come, write.

GEO. W. BEALL,

A Miracle in Leather

"Sire, if thou wilt but place thy foot upon this measure, I will in twelve hours, cover the earth with leather!"

How a Monk of the third century accomplished this feat is told in "THE CRAFT OF ST. CRISPIN," a neat little illustrated book which unfolds the history of the boot, and tells of its foot forming influences down to the ripened period of the SLATER SHOE.

Every page is rich in foot-lore and shrewd suggestions on choosing, buying, and taking care of, the correct kind of Shoes. Secrets of the last, the newest shapes, and most foot fitting forms, the different tannages, and latest colorings, of leather, are revealed and described in simple terms.

A limited number of copies will be given away if asked from against the existence of an Upper House. The simple proposition is that William McKenzie shall be made honorary colonel of the 45th Battalion, a body of stalwarts whose excellent training may be credited to Colonel Samuel Hughes. The county of Victoria, to which the 45th belongs, is well known to William McKenzie. It was there he spent his boyhood days, years before he ever dreamed that such a mouster as Clifford Sifton, hayforker of railway contractors, etc., would be permitted to travel about in the garments of human beings. William McKenzie has still a very kindly regard for the county of Victoria. He is fully eligible for the rank of honorary colonel, and, if the persuasions of friends prevail, McKenzie before very long will be the titular head of the 45th. But then arises the question of Dan Mann's promotion. The name of Dan Mann for months past has been uttered

IN THE SAME BREATH

that spoke the word McKenzie. Dan Mann's patriotism was quite as conspicuous as his brother contractor's, and it would be manifestly unfair to lift one into military fame and leave the other a blooming civilian. Friends of Dan Mann will be overjoyed to learn that he may step into a position twin brother to that which William McKenzie is to enter. The 20th of Halton is in need of an honorary colonel. Halton is the county where Dan Mann was bred and born. More than once he marched off with the 20th to bloodless drill, and who to-day more than he deserves the rank of honorary colonel? So soon as William McKenzie dons the lace, the boom for Dan Mann will begin. One or both may refuse. There are many things that generous honorary colonels, gentlemen of means, may do for their regiments, all of which would probably be forthcoming should William McKenzie and Dan Mann don the spurs. True-hearted Canadians, patriots, in fact, they will prove themselves, if they accept the duty thus thrust upon them. They have no need to hang back from a fear that it is a Clifford Sifton game, for the Statesman of Brandon has had not a word to say in the formulation of the plans."

What About the Klondike?

The clamor of war may have sent a wave of oblivion over some minds, but it is not so very long ago that the Miners were threatening us with rebellion, invasion, loss of territory and black starvation in the Klondike region if the Mann-McKenzie line to Teslin Lake were not authorized at once. True, it could not have been ready for use before autumn, at the earliest; but the great thing in the Ministerial mind appeared to be to get prompt Parliamentary endorsement of the scheme. This was to scatter the horrid evils that clouded their vision, as awaking does the misshapen denizens of dreamland. But Parliament, as represented chiefly by the Senate, declined to endorse the astounding scheme; and from that day to this we have heard nothing from the Ministerial benches either of the horrors or of anything else in connection with the affair. The contractors were stopped so suddenly, it seems, that they have not yet had time to get word to all their men; and some of the outposts of their Arctic expedition are still plugging away in the wilds under the impression that they are saving the Klondike to Canada, and the miners from starvation. The poor fellows are totally unaware that the Government has abandoned that fable, and can now talk temperance to plebeian deputations without once thinking of that distant country so lately in danger—for political purposes only—of rebellion, gaunt hunger and sudden death. The people of British Columbia, too, want to know what the Government is going to do about the trade of the Klondike, and are clamoring for their own Government to go ahead and take up the task the Federal Government has so suddenly dropped. Still no sign from the Dominion Government. Apparently its interest in the Yukon district ceased when the Senate would not permit it to give away four million acres of gold land for the building of a short and interior railway. Possibly this did kill its political concern in the matter. But what about the rebellion?—what about the loss of the gold lands to the British flag?—what about the starvation which threatened the thousands of brave miners who would seek the yellow hauls at the mouth of a glacier?—Montrast Star.

MEN FOR HIGH OFFICES.

TWO ILLUSTRIOUS CANADIANS.

The Ottawa correspondent of the Toronto Telegram adds "insult to injury" by thus poking fun at the two distinguished philanthropists who did n't get the Yukon railway contract:

"Robbed of the right to do an act that would have scooped in for Canada all the Yukon trade in sight, William McKenzie and Dan Mann are still on the highway to a glorious future. The world will never know the cash value of the patriotism that lingered in the bosoms of those two contractors when, with a docility almost sublime, they made themselves passive subjects of the hypnotizer Sifton. Only the words of the Liberal press are recorded to indicate that, but for the treason of the wicked old Senate, the patriotic sacrifice of Dan Mann and William McKenzie would have been worth to the country millions and millions of cash. But the patriotism of that distinguished pair may yet prove to be the kind that the withering blasts of Tory politicians can never drive away. Friends who have grieved that patriots tried and trusted as William McKenzie and Dan Mann should go unrewarded, have a new scheme for the honourable elevation of the two. It is not to the Senate. Neither is old enough to fall into that
