

WELL FED HOGS PAY.

Many Need Not Be Kept a Full Year and They Will Bring a Good Price.

Owing to the unprofitable expense of roofing and more space than is absolutely necessary, one of the great problems in the interior arrangement of farm buildings is the economizing of room. Such being the case, every practical device possible should be sought after, and when one is discovered that answered the purpose fairly well it ought never to be forgotten.

This is highly applicable to the horse manger shown herewith, for not only is it convenient and economical, but just the thing wherever the space for a horse stable is small, as usually occurs when the stalls are arranged across one end of the barn, or if so that the horses face the barn floor.

As can be seen in the illustration, in place of the commonly wide and deep manger construct a through (1) about a foot wide and the same in depth, using hardwood boards for the purpose if possible. In front of this, away from where the horse stands, insert iron rods or tough wooden poles (2) the full width of the trough and just far enough apart so that the animal can get its nose between them to pull out the hay or fodder placed for it by its keeper upon the slat support (3). And now is this held in position? Why, by being hinged at the bottom and supported from above at regular intervals by being attached to wires or ropes (4) arranged there for this purpose.

Thus you see it is a very simple device, and yet possessed of numerous advantages in that it saves space, wastes little or no feed and has no hateful corners in which the refuse parts of the feed may collect. The fact is, if this affair faces the barn floor all seed and chaff must fall through the slat support onto the same, and as this in turn may be scraped up and fed to the cows, not a single thing edible need be wasted.

Provided corn fodder is at any time largely fed, all one has to do is to let down the slat support from the top occasionally and out upon the floor will roll the stalks, whence they can be easily conveyed to any spot desired, which, of course, should not be the manure pile, since cornstalks are always a nuisance in dung of any kind, unless it be a mulch designed for some special purpose.

And how about the economizing of room? Why, if the manger is next to the barn floor, when drawing in hay or the like drop down the slat support from the top, leave it so, and it will be entirely out of the way.

As to the material for constructing this support, generally speaking it is best made of half-inch boards four inches wide, and in fastening it at the bottom so that it will swing up and down use common four-inch strap hinges, these serving the purpose almost as well as iron ones.

Talk on Fruit.

Plums and poultry go well together. The poultry clean out the curculio and thrive on them, and plums thrive a good deal better without them.

A great many of the diseases of trees and plants are diseases of weakness and can be prevented by thoroughly good culture and manuring such as will keep the tree or plant in a vigorous growing condition. This is particularly true with the diseases of small fruits.

Rely on well known varieties of small fruits, but keep in touch with the testing of new ones. Every fruit grower can afford to do a little of experimenting, perhaps, but he should take care to do no more than he can afford to see fall. If somebody comes around with something very remarkable for sale, let his talk go in at one ear and out at the other.

Never allow a fruit tree to overbear. Nothing is gained and much is lost by neglect to thin. A tree will give in fewer fruits all the yield by measure that it can give without injury to itself. The fruit will be larger, better developed and of better quality. Overbearing one season is a draft on the future resources of the tree which it will not recover from for several years if at all.

Turkey Culture.

I prefer the Bronze turkey. The public wants a turkey weighing 7 to 10 pounds and with a yellow skin. The first eggs I set under a hen, the next setting the turkey takes and as a general thing she will bring off a brood in the Fall. If warm quarters are provided they are easily raised, and bring a good price in the Spring when there is a scarcity. The best thing I find for lice is ash and sulphur, mixed and put in the coops, and I always put a little epsom salts in the drinking water about twice a week for the health of the birds. They have their freedom as soon as they are strong enough to run around. Little turkeys do much better with an old wicker. A hen mother will run the legs off from little turkeys, whereas an old turkey will hardly stir out of her tracks until her little ones are good and strong; then she is a great rambler. The best thing I find for food is what we call Dutch cheese, an egg boiled hard and black pepper mixed with it and plenty of run. Toward Fall they will naturally turn their heads in the direction of some neighbor's corn or buckwheat field and will be in fine condition by Thanksgiving.—Mrs. Charles Smart in Farm and Home.

Just a Slip.

Miss De Courcy is musical, and when Harold Tompkins called round the other evening she asked him to sing. The poor fellow is bashful but obliging and he attempted to give her his favorite:

"Thou art so near and yet so far,
Beautiful star, beautiful star."

But she stood by the piano just where he could look into her face, and it must have embarrassed him, for he forgot the words, and this is how he rendered it:

"Thou art so far, and yet so near,
Beautiful steer, beautiful steer."

She won't speak to him now, and he vows to devote himself hereafter to songs without words.

What Really Happens.

A new definition of absent-mindedness, which is humor if not psychology, appears in the Indianapolis "News" in this dialogue:

"Pa, what does 'absent-minded' mean?"
"My boy, that's easy. Did you ever stop to think?"
"Yes."
"And your thoughts ran on?"
"Yes."
"Well, that's it."

NEWSPAPER LAW.

1. A postmaster is bound to give notice by letter (returning the paper does not answer the law), when a subscriber does not take his paper out of the office and state the reasons for its not being taken. Any neglect to do so makes the postmaster responsible to the publisher for payment.

2. If any person orders his paper discontinued he must pay all arrears, or the publisher may continue to send it until payment is made, and collect the whole amount, whether it is taken from the office or not. There can be no legal discontinuance until the payment is made.

3. Any person who takes a paper from the post-office, whether directed to his name or not, or whether he has subscribed or not, is responsible for the pay.

4. If a subscriber orders his paper to be stopped at a certain time, and the publisher continues to send, the subscriber is bound to pay for it if he takes it out of the post-office. This proceeds upon the ground that a man must pay for what he gets.

5. The courts have decided that refusing to take newspapers and periodicals from the post-office, or removing and leaving them uncollected, is prima facie evidence of intentional refusal.
