a Terrible Case - It that the Great Kidney Proves Remedy is good for Old and Young alike and Cures all Forms of Kidney Disease.

Weyburn, Assa., N.W.T., Dec. 21 .-(Special) .- No more remarkable cure of Dropsy has ever been put on record than that of little Edith Harris, the two-year old daughter Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Harris of this place. little girl had dropsy in its worst form. She was swollen from her feet to her shoulders so badly that the doctor was afraid one of her feet e would burst. Her natural waist measure was eighteen inches, but when the disease was at its worst, she measured thirty-four inches. Two doctors attended her, but after three months struggle with the disease the child was gradually growing worse and the parents had about given up all hope of saving the life of their child.

At the same time they determined | From eight to nine o'clock the secto try Dodd's Kidney Pills. HOW TO PREVENT A "COLD. Quick Change of Temperature Dangerous.

How to prevent a "cold" is at this time a matter of no small importance. The question resolves itself into an attention to little things beginning rather than more weighty ones at the end. The weak wittiest. Jo-king; the leanest, Thinmortal is most apt to suffer from king; the thirstiest, drin-king; any epidemic influence. The over- slyest, Win-king; the most garrulous, wrought individual is relatively in the same category. Thus it happens that the "cold" seizes the victim when he is tired, and a draught that would not affect him under other circumstances is quite sure to show its malignant influence within a few hours after the slightest exposure.

The shiver and chill are nature's first warnings of the trouble, then follow the irritation of the chest, the harassing cough, the sneezing nasal discharge and stuffy frantal headache. The careful man heeds these symptoms at once, takes to his room and uses his home remedies, but the daring and thoughtless one trusts to the vain chance of roughing it through. Then also in turn comes the old story of "the neglected cold" and long list of lung affections that follow in its wakes.

Catarrhal pneumonia, a most fatal ailment, almost invariably commences with the simplest warnings. though the disease is considered infectious and due to a specific microbe, the latter organism never attacks previously healthy tissue. The initiative cold places the mucous membrane of the air passages in a properly receptive condition for the effective invasion of the waiting organ-

It is truthfully said that our houses are for the most part hot air ovens during the winter time. There is no doubt that this fact explains row. in a great measure the well-known prevalence of catarrahs. The English, for instance, with a more humid and equally changeable climate are wonderfully immune against "colds," as we view it, and this is due in no small measure to their cooler and better ventilated homes, their outdoor habits in facing storms and in their ability to react by vigorous skin circulation against any degree of cold or wet.

Who knows how many colds might be prevented during the winter by following these few simple suggestions? Each man should be able to manufacture his own animal heat, and a reasonable amount of clothing and ordinary warmth within doors, should do the rest in the hardening process that will in the end give him the best of all protections.
