CORRESPONDENCE.

To the Editor of the Fenelon Falls Gazette:
Sir,

Will you kindly allow me space for the following letter?

The Rev. H. B. Kenny intimated to his congregation on Sunday evening that those who dissent from his views regarding the punishment of sinners are "insipid talkers" and "little pigmies." When a minister of the Gospel, from his entrenched position behind his pulpit, attempts to thus hold up to ridicule the opinions of others, he surely invites criticism. I venture to assert that Mr. Kenny's opinion, as expressed in the language he condescends to use, is wide of the mark, and he was far from exemplifying the spirit of Christ when he made such statements. When an honest disciple of Christ finds that the Bible teaches that the wages of sin is death, and that Churchianity says that the wages of sin is everlasting life in misery; also that the Bible says that the wicked will be punished with everlasting destruction, and Mr. Kenny says that means everlasting preservation of life in torment, surely the matter is worthy of closer investigation. On the side of those who differ from Mr. Kenny's views, much can be said that is both reasonable and consistent with the general teaching of the Bible, and that has so appealed to the heart and conscience of not a few members of the Methodist church as to win them over to the side of those whom Mr. Kenny affects to despise as "insipid talkers" and "little pigmies." The Saviour's injunction says: "Take heed that ye despise not on of these little ones." D. GOULD.

IT IS BETTER.

An article made or produced by a specialist is better than the average because the producer makes a special study of the production of that particular article, and has facilities for putting it on the market in the best possible way.

For that reason honey from my apiary is better than the average. I make a specialty of its production, and have facilities which make possible for me to put it out in the best condition.
