NO COAL AT GIBRALTAR

BRITISH FLEET WAS PRACTICALLY HELPLESS.

Sequel to the Baltic Fleet Crisis—Commandeered a Supply.

It is hard to believe that when everyone thought that Great Britain was on the brink of war with Russia after the North Sea outrage the British fleet was practically helpless at Gibraltar owing to want of coal, says the London Daily Chronicle.

Yet this is the sensational statement made in the Indian Daily News by Captain Berryman, of the steamer London Bridge, on his arrival at Calcutta.

The London Bridge left England with a cargo of coal for Port Said just before the North Sea occurrence. Captain Berryman arrived off the Straits of Gibraltar about four o'clock in the morning.

"We were going through quietly," he told a representative of the Indian Daily News, "when out of the harbor came torpedo boats and launches.

"Who are you?" asked the leading boat, and when I replied I was told I must come into Gibraltar.

TOOK VESSEL'S COAL.

"I was greatly astonished at this, and thought they were stopping all traffic through the Straits. But when I reached the harbor I found they wanted my coal. They told me to start unloading at once, and the London Bridge went from ship to ship until she was empty. We were two days over the job.

"There were fourteen war vessels in the bay, and they had been gathered hurriedly from all parts of the Mediterranean. So they were fairly well empty by the time they reached Gibraltar.

"What stock of coal was there at Gibraltar? Well, I do not know for certain. Ashore there was, I believe only 1,000 tons of patent fuel in hulks. But I had no opportunity to see how much there was on shore.

OTHER BOATS STOPPED.

"The stock must have been low, however, for I was not the only boat that was stopped. Ten others at least there were within the two days only—all English, of course."

Asked for further details, Captain Berryman continued:

"I don't know if the Government had arranged with the Port Said people to buy the coal before they took it. Probably this may have been arranged, for the business could be settled quickly by cablegram. But it was the British Government, you see, that commandeered it, and the London Bridge is a British ship, so that did not trouble me at all."

The London Bridge reached Gibraltar at the time when Admiral Rojestvensky was at Vigo with his squadron.

BEDS OF SOLDIERS.

In Germany and Austria the soldier has a simple straw bed with one or two covers, neither sheet nor mattress. In Russia until recently he slept with his clothes on, on a camp bed, but now ordinary beds begin to be used—the result of association with more civilized countries. After this it cannot be doubted that the French soldier's bed is the best of all, with its wooden or iron bedstead, a straw bed, a wool mattress, sheets, a brown woolen coverlet, and an extra quilt for cold weather. Thus the bed of the French soldier is the softest of all soldier's beds, as that of the French peasant is acknowledged also to be the best of all European countries.

JACK'S HEROISM.

"Of course I love you, Jack; but if I thought you'd done something very brave I would love you a lot more."

"Well, I've promised to marry you on my present salary."

"Forgive me, dearest, that's simply heroic."

LEAVE WELL ENOUGH ALONE.

According to a well-founded rumor, the Dominion Government will during the present session be urged to impose a customs duty on grades of fence wire which are now on the free list. That such a tax would prove an unjust burden to the farmers of Canada there is no doubt. In the older parts of the Dominion the old wooden fences are being year by year replaced by wire structures, and in the Great West, which is rapidly being settled, practically all the fencing is being done with wire in one or other of its many forms of construction. Were the kinds of wire most in use for fence construction manufactured in Canada, there might be some excuse for imposing an import tax, but since there are practically no factories for making it in operation in the Dominion, whom could such a tax benefit?

That the price of fencing material would be raised to practically the extent of the duty there can be no doubt. This would mean that a duty of 25 or 30 per cent. would impose an extra tax of $150 to $175 on the fencing required for an average farm. Nor would the rural community suffer only to the extent of an increased expense to those who have to fence, but a great deal of farm improvement would be delayed for many years, which would operate strongly in keeping down the value of land. Rather than impose a tariff on Nos. 9, 12 and 13, smooth galvanized wire, as has been proposed, it would be a much saner policy to remove the present duty of 20 per cent. on Nos. 7 and 11. If this were done, the revenue would not suffer, for these grades are not extensively imported, but if they were free a stronger and more satisfactory fence could be obtained without enhancing the cost.

"George," she exclaimed, with enthusiasm, "this is the happiest moment I have known since papa took me to the oculist!" "Oculist!" "Yes, dear; you never would have known that my left eye is a glass one." Then the moon went under a cloud, and George sat down and buried his face in the sofa cushion.
